To a very sweet friend that I've known ever since we was "little" girls. The 1st grade, I believe. We had a lot of good times in grade school, especially when we went to "Daddy 500."
I'll never forget what happen at my dumber party, ya know what I'm talking about. Well we've made up this far and I know for a fact that we can finish next year. So you stay sweet as ever for this man in your life.
I will always remember you. Stay Sweet!
Hope to see ya around this summer

...building on a new image

Left: A stack of boxes in the hall offers Dwight Sawyer and Paul Turner a place to stop and talk. Below: The new addition allows room for many new classrooms.

NEW BUILDING

After years of detours and literally millions of dollars, the new addition to the building was completed. A new music department provided a much needed band room and a larger choral room. The new auditorium gave the students a modern stage and teachers a large area that could be partitioned off into four separate rooms.

Overstuffed halls became a thing of the past as new wide halls provided different routes to classes. For the first time in years there were enough lockers to go around without sharing.

Also included in the addition were the science and math departments. The larger cafeteria seemed to arrive just in time as more people began eating in the cafeteria than before. The commons, located outside the gym, became the gathering place after lunch.

For the first time in AHS history, the school was one building - not a campus. Students and alumni showed their pride in the new AHS when sometimes thousands gathered to support the Indians at sporting events and activities. Such Indian spirit displayed the true effect of building on a new image.

Left: After a rainstorm, a puddle of water reflects the Indiana, which can be found on the south side of the Wigwam. Above: Students gather at a locker to talk before going to lunch. The new lockers made it possible for each student to have his or her own locker without having to share with a friend.

NEW DECADE

1980! What exactly would the new decade mean? It began with soaring prices. People shuddered to pay $.35 for a coke, $1 for a gallon of gas, $60 for a prom dress and $8000 for a new Camaro. Due to a fuel shortage blamed on wasteful Americans and greedy oil corporations, Americans tried to save fuel every way possible. Many students stopped driving to school every day. Thermostats were lowered in the winter and raised in the summer. All businesses were even required by law to keep their air-conditioning at 78 degrees or more.

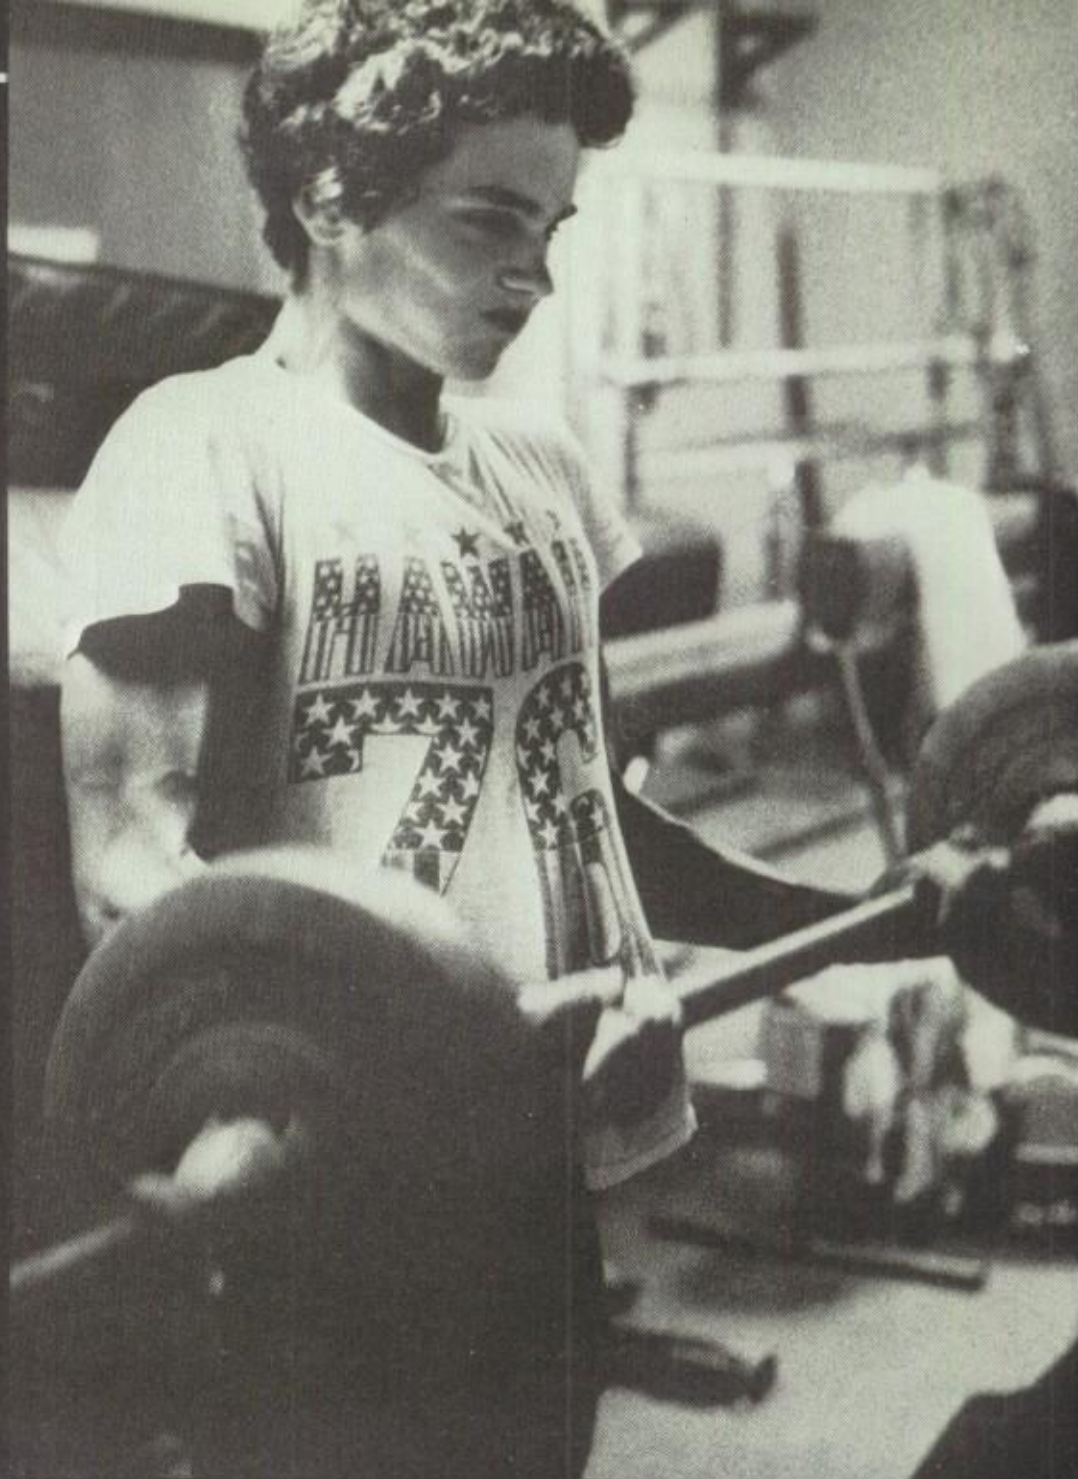

Despite the energy crunch and the tremendous inflation rate, the new decade promised many benefits. Already several test tube babies had been born.

A new coin, the Susan B. Anthony dollar, came into existence. Scientists could treat some types of cancer and hoped to discover a cure for all types. Astronomers foresaw the establishment of communities on Mars. New kinds of energy such as solar and nuclear offered a possible answer to the energy shortage.

Within the students' lives the new decade offered more immediate results. It gave kids a new start as they grew from adolescence to adulthood. What better time could there be than the new decade, for students to start building on a new image?

Left: Sophomore Janet Bossemeyer proves that girls as well as guys enjoy the economical and fun transportation a mo-ped provides.

Below: Jogging around the block is one way that Gretchen Irby keeps in shape. Many AHS students built on a new image by joining the "jogging craze."

NEW IMAGE

What do you mean that AHS students projected a new image? They didn't look any different. They still spent Friday nights cruisin'. They were, for the most part, either tuned to KISS 99 and loved disco or tuned to Q 95 and hated disco. Like most teenagers they spent 99% of their time in jeans and a t-shirt. They hated homework and loved weekends. They sure seemed the same. What was this "new image?"

Responsibility grew among students. They recognized how important the future was and began to set goals. They suffered along with other Americans with the problems of a fuel shortage. "Because of the gas shortage," senior Jeff Ehrlich admitted, "I tried to pool rides to school instead of driving every day."

Self improvement was another way students built on the new image. Each individual improved himself in his own way. While some started running or jogging to stay in shape others gave up smoking. Many students settled down to serious studying to help prepare themselves for college.

Students helped better the community by taking part in community projects. Groups like Seventeen Club and Y-teens donated time and money to the needy. Other students did volunteer work for various causes.

Years of labels finally wore off. Racial problems were nonexistent at AHS. The Indian spirit brought all races together. The changes at AHS were no surprise though - just one way of building on a new image.

Puppy Love Takes A Back Seat

In elementary school boys had "coodles," and in junior high, high, they were considered just "friends." In senior high school, however, everything was looked at a little differently.

Dating was a big part of the weekend at AHS, and most students agreed that it was the most enjoyable way to spend their time. Many parents thought that dating was simply a very small and innocent part of growing up. Students proved that dating wasn't what it used to be, however. Now that parking replaced puppy love, and parties outnumbered soc hops, parents wondered just how innocent a date really was.

One thing that all dates did seem to have in common was the finale to the evening. A good-night kiss on the front door-step was an important part of the night, unless, of course, the date happened to be one that "didn't kiss on the first date."

Dating was just one of the many activities to look forward to after a long week of classes and homework. No matter what the plans were, it was always nice to have a "friend" on the weekend with whom you could exchange "coodles."

Hay and Gary Vance show that a kiss goodnight is the best way to end an evening.

Weekends Are Made For People

The most often used word to describe a weekend? Party! After all the school books were put away and the bad test grades shoved to the back of the mind for the approaching Friday and Saturday nights, the "other" side of the student suddenly emerged.

Whether it was before or after football and basketball games, at a student's house where the parents were gone for the weekend, or just while "cruising" around, AHS students always managed to find a place to "have a good time!"

Dating was also an important part of the weekend, and AHS dances and soc-hops gave many students an excuse to stay out until odd hours of the night. Being able to sleep in the next morning rather than having to wake up at 6:00, was also a part of the weekend that most students took advantage of. Concerts were a popular source of entertainment, and movies were always available when all else failed.

"Cruising" was a favorite past time for those with cars, but more often than not, "cruising" turned into speeding and racing, even on busy streets.

Although there were always those few devoted scholars who insisted on staying home on the weekend nights to study their honors chemistry, or those hardworking individuals who were forced to put in their time at a job for spending money, when they did go out, most students agreed "weekends weren't made for work, but forwhatever."

A Touch of Class

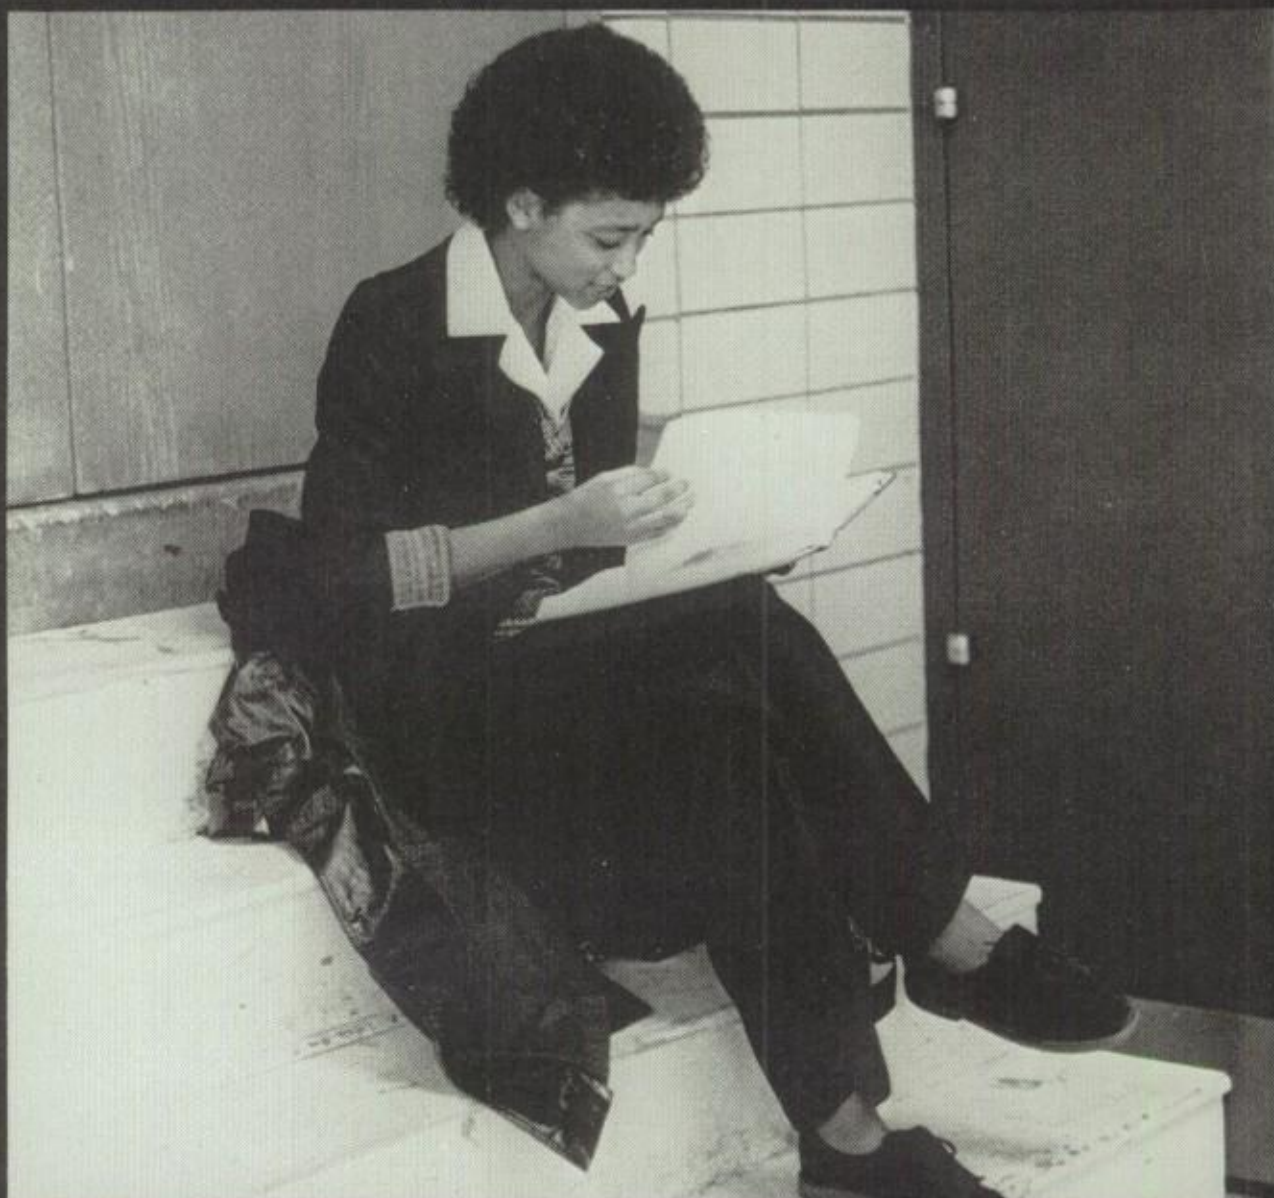

ACADEMICS

At 6:00 the all too familiar sound of the alarm clock acted as a starting gun for the day. A quick shower followed by a makeshift breakfast usually left students running late.

Car trouble, locker trouble, sickness, trains and a long line at McDonald's were common excuses of tardy students. However, second semester when Saturday work crew was threatened for more than three tardies a semester, students somehow found it a bit easier to arrive on time.

Although most hated homework, the majority of students enjoyed their years at AHS. A spectrum of business, science, social studies, English, art, shop, home economics, math and foreign language classes gave students the opportunity to form lasting friendships with many unique and different individuals while learning, growing and building on a new image at AHS.

Arts Are Creative

"Sorry Bev, I can't talk now, I've got to change Susie's diaper before the next class." This was just one of the problems the students in child development faced. The class taught child care using infants and young children. They provided enjoyment and entertaining games for the children, but the students were equally amused by the children's pure and simple reaction to life's problems.

Later the child development classes visited nursery schools and worked with older children. This class was one of the many specialized classes offered by the Home Ec. Department.

Family living featured a wedding performed by a minister. The class taught ways to deal with family problems and situations with children and economics. Students also played roles of other family members to help them to better understand the problems that faced each family member.

While most students were busy with their books, the art classes, which were hidden downstairs, used their hands to be creative. One of the projects they took on was to decorate the display case in the commons area. Art Club sold posters to make money, which they used to buy supplies for the art classes.

Psychology Abandons Couch

The Mental Health Center, a funeral home, the Urban League and Harter House welcomed eager to learn Psychology II students. Psychology II was just one of the social sciences offered by the Social Studies Department. Students actually went out and worked voluntarily for some cause in order to pass the class. Psych students also welcomed guest speakers who lectured on everything from hypnosis to graphology.

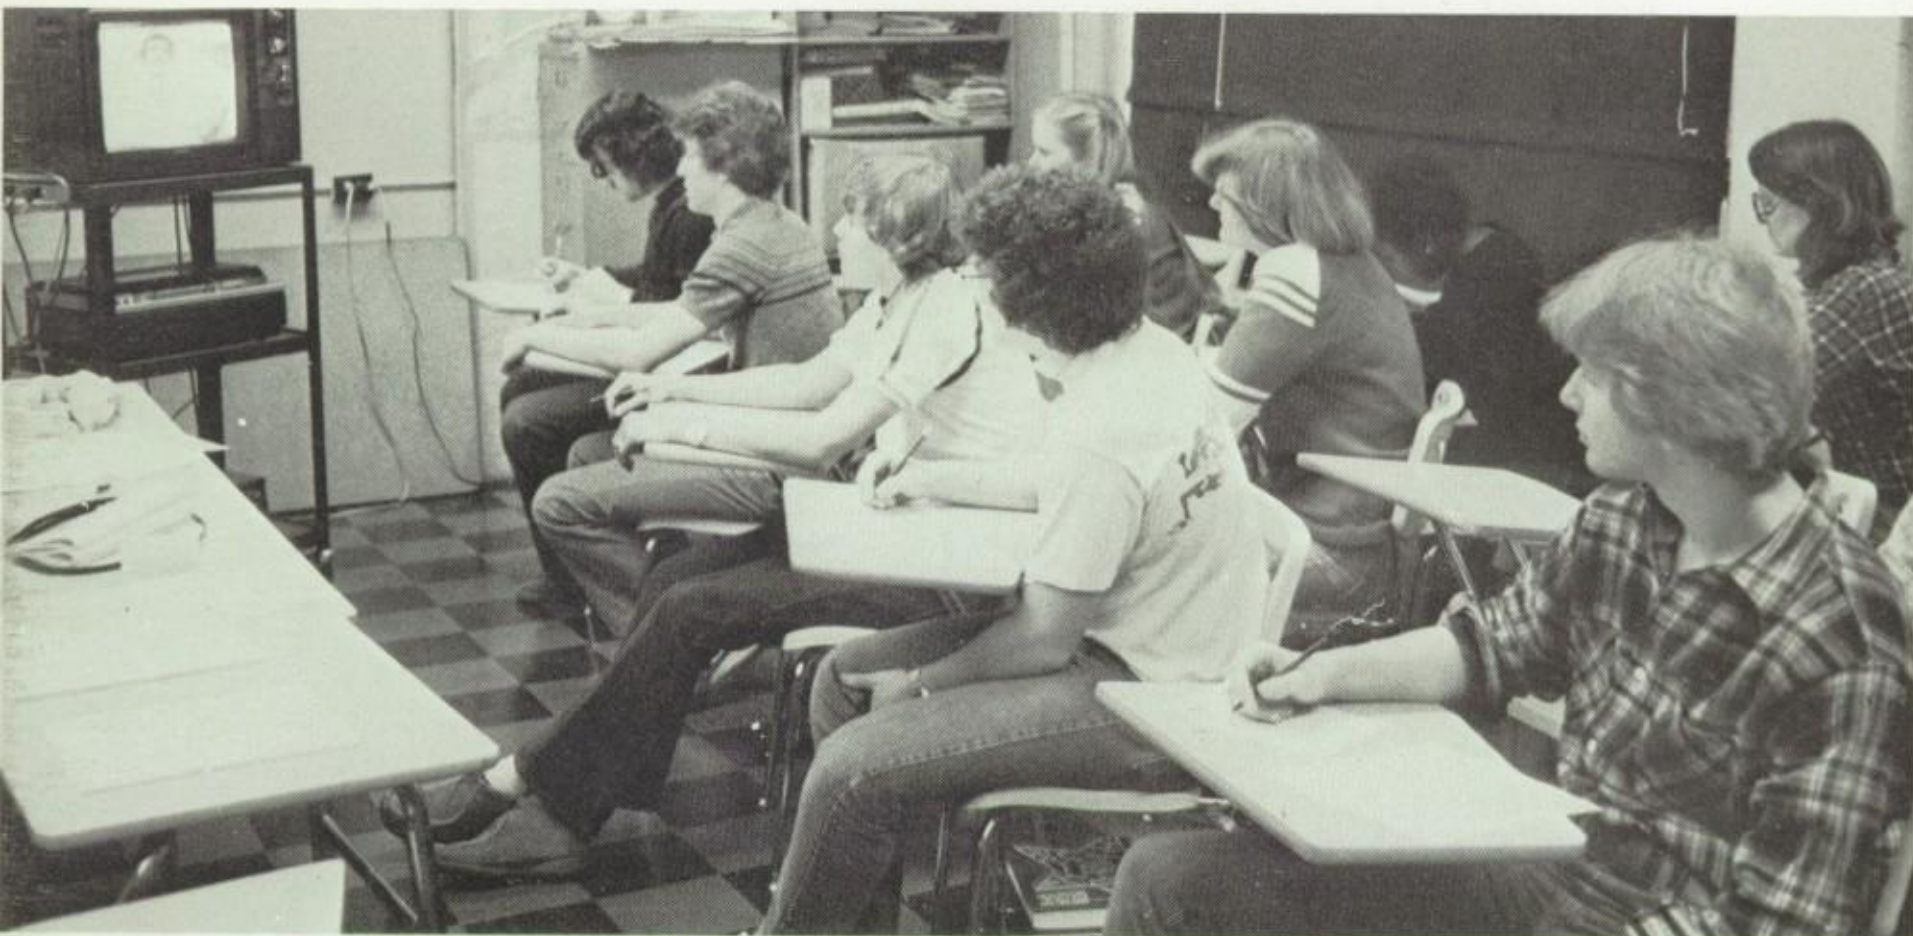

The Social Studies Department also offered basic and accelerated classes in history, government, American studies and sociology. Although some students took classes to meet requirements, many discovered they thoroughly enjoyed their classes and selected a few electives in this field.

Sophomores Start Driving

"I'm so nervous, I drive tomorrow and I've never driven before in my life." This expression was often heard as sophomores started their driver education.

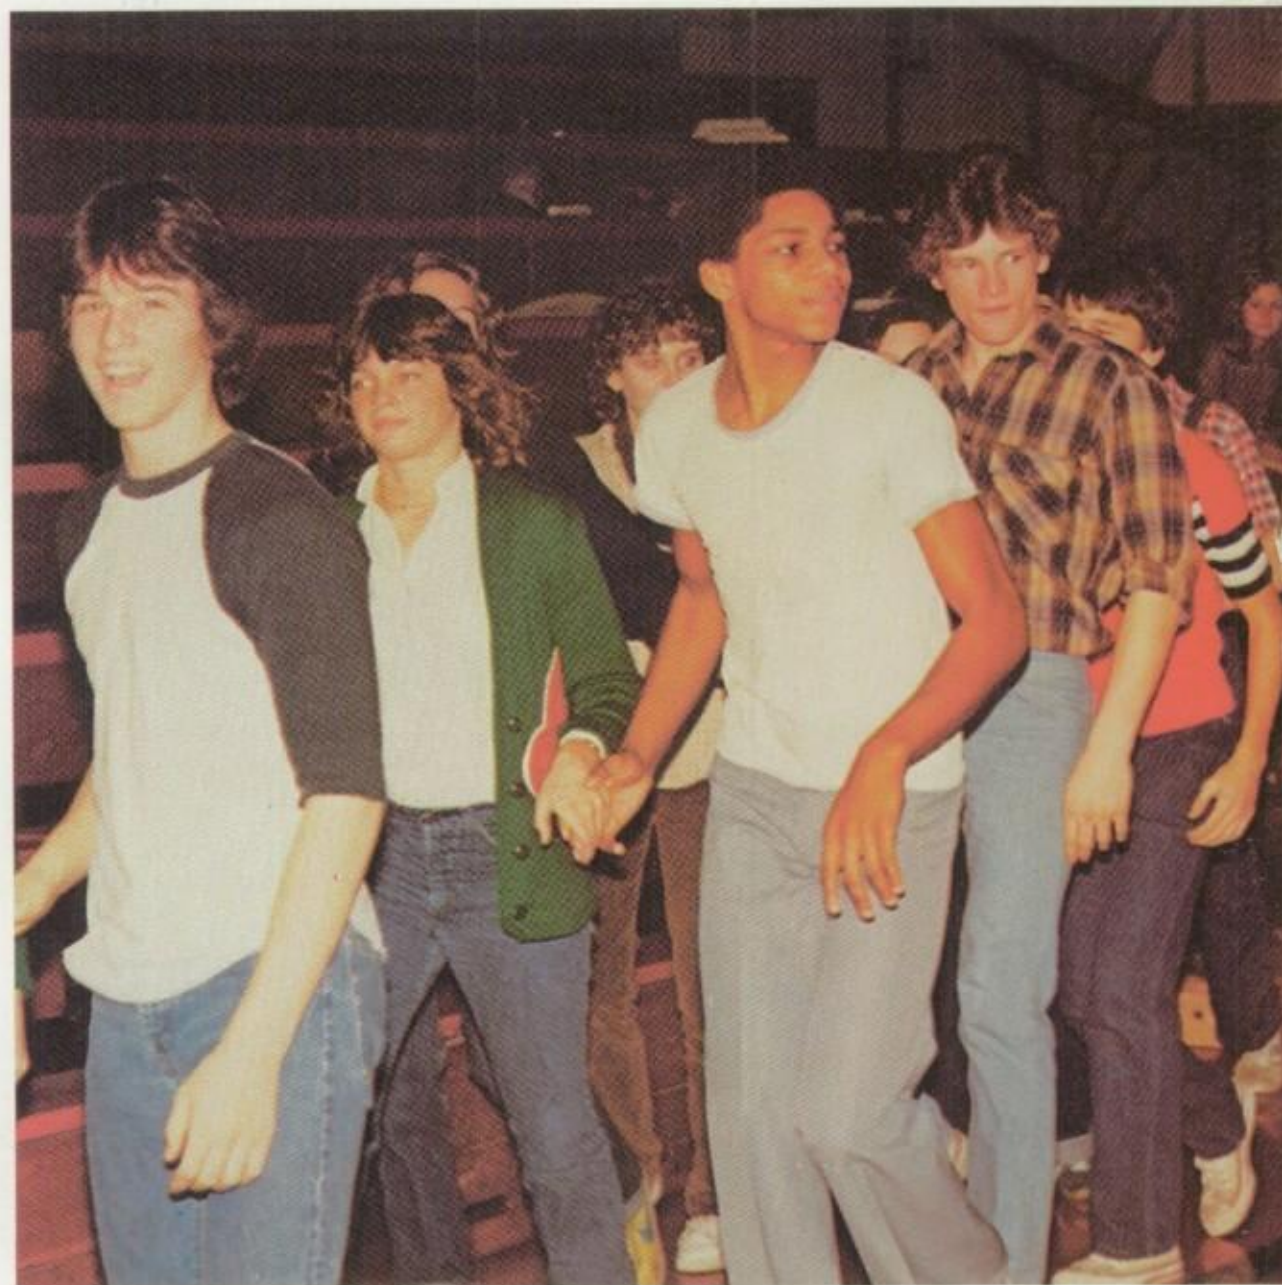

Driver education classes were large and divided into two classrooms. These classes were then subdivided into driving, simulating, and observing. Their teachers took the "daring job" of teaching the road skills. Driver education tried to develop defensive driving habits which would carry on after the students left driver ed. Driving attitudes, which cause many accidents, were also stressed to help prevent these unnecessary accidents.

Physical education class followed city wide curriculum. Classes provided choices, such as tennis and field hockey, and tried to allow for the group's interests. Sophomore P.E. retaught and built upon the skills learned in the freshman year. Donald Reedy, a sophomore, said, "I like the swimming, but I could do without the dancing."

Advanced physical education was a class for the more outgoing athlete. The entire gym was available for these students so that they could participate in a wide variety of activities. They held intramural tournaments, bowled, shot at the pistol range, and played golf as part of their unstructured program.

Above: Simulation accounts for part of the driving grade. It helps immature drivers with many different on the road situations. The Accent is on Speaking

As the school year started, the French and Spanish classes found themselves in the relocated language arts department. This new change gave the language classes larger classrooms. These larger rooms were more appropriate and were much needed. More students elected to take these popular classes as part of their schedule.

Approximately 100 students of the Spanish classes took a field trip to Indianapolis. This activity took the students to Clowes Hall to see Jose Greco. This trip gave the students a better understanding of Spanish entertainment. After seeing Greco, the classes went to La Paz for an authentic Mexican meal. Many students took advantage of this opportunity and found the food much to their liking.

The French classes took their annual trip to La Tour's for a taste of many of the French foods. The more advanced students added variety to their daily assignments, and did skits and made up their own commercials in French. The French classes received the privilege of using the new headphones, or portable language lab, as did all of the other foreign languages. The teachers thought that the new equipment was very beneficial for the foreign language students. It gave the students an opportunity to hear themselves vocally. This increased their ability to use the foreign dialect that they were studying.

No Homework?

Here's Why

1. My dog ate it.
2. The trash man took it accidentally.
3. My little brother got sick on it.
4. My mom washed it with my jeans.
5. I mistakenly wrote it in invisible ink.
6. I don't believe in killing trees.
7. The FBI needed it as evidence.
8. The house flooded.
9. I left it at the hospital where I do voluntary work.
10. Robbers stole it.
11. I really wanted to do it, but it's against my religion.
12. I'm allergic to paper.
13. My starving, ill and freezing family ran out of fire wood so I generously let them use my book.
14. I donated it to the nun's and orphan's paper drive.
15. I was busy last night preparing a Christmas show for blind people without families.
16. Someone stole my locker.

"I'm not going in that graveyard; it's too dark," stated a new member of French Club. French Club held a Halloween party for all members, and it was the traditional initiation for new members. Each person came in an original costume, and new members were forced to walk through a graveyard, as part of initiation.

French Club officers planned to help with the language olympics in the spring. This was an event enjoyed by all language clubs. The olympics were amusing as the clubs bouted it out.

Going to La Tour's, a French restaurant in Indianapolis, was a very interesting event for the members of French Club. This trip gave the students a chance to taste the French delicacies they had heard about.

Spanish Club was very active too this year, mainly because of its large size. Some of its activities included sponsoring a roller and ice skating party with French Club. The Spaniards held a Christmas party in December, which was well attended. Club members gathered together one month and made Mexican foods and used their creativity in making Spanish crafts. The club went to Chi Chi's, a Mexican restaurant in Indianapolis, for its annual spring banquet. Their activities ended with a picnic to celebrate the year in May.

Languages Build Foundation

Some considered Latin a dead language, but around 100 students at A.H.S. certainly disagreed. Miss Nancy Durr described Latin as "the foundation of the English language, especially grammar and vocabulary."

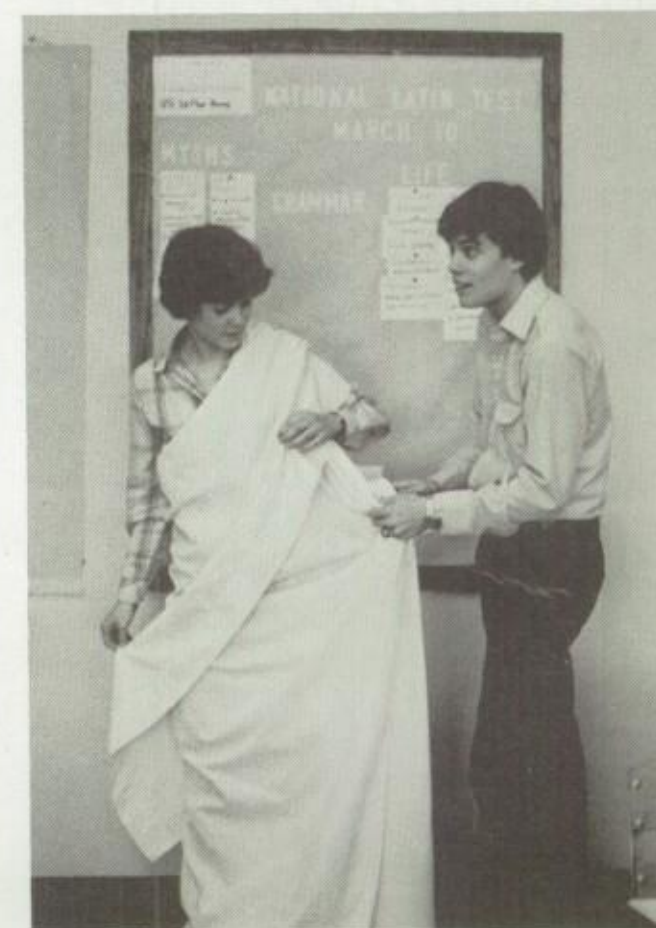

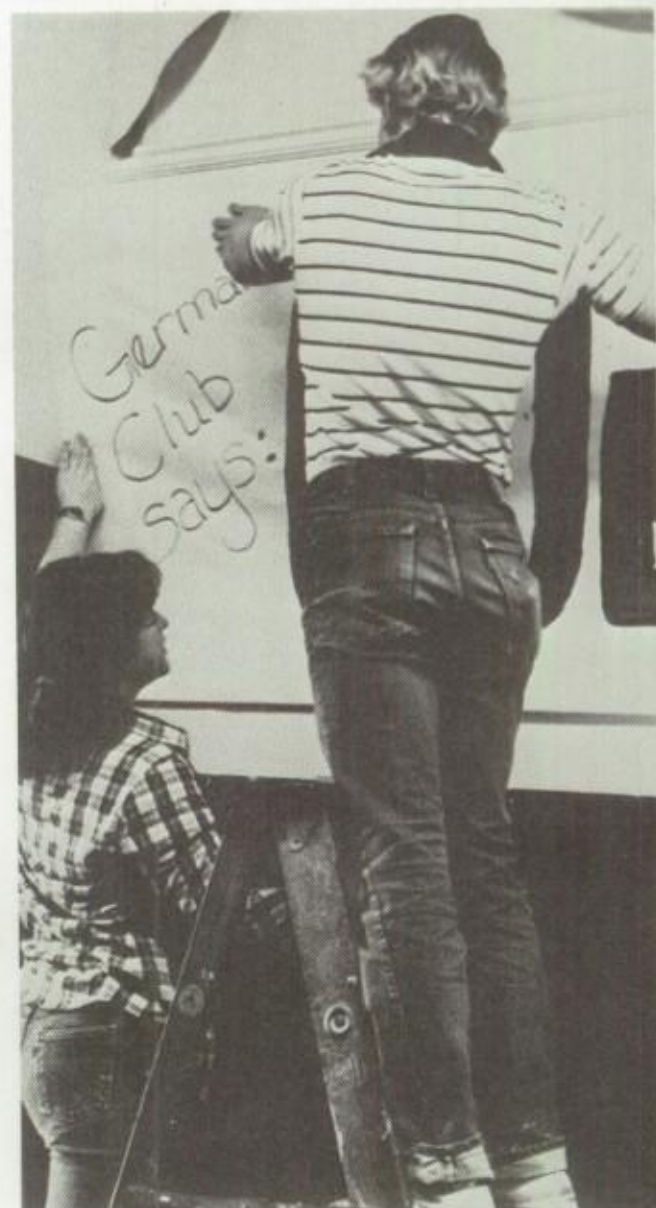

The majority of Latin students found this to be true, whether trying to figure out the definition of a word or determining its part of speech. In Latin class, students were also taught the customs and practices of the Greek and Roman people and mythology.

The school year was busy for those who took German. The holidays were spent German style as members sent each other Deutsch Christmas cards and held a party at the home of President Jamie Reese. Good food, games, and German carols were part of the Yuletide celebration. The year had its American parties too; roller and ice skating took care of this.

Sponsor Miss DeWeese ended the year by taking the club to King's Island.

Pencil and Paper Still #1

Trigonometry, calculus, and advanced math sounded difficult and confusing, but for those with mathematical minds, they were just an added class. The Math department also offered classes in basic math, algebra, and geometry to fill requirements for college and graduation.

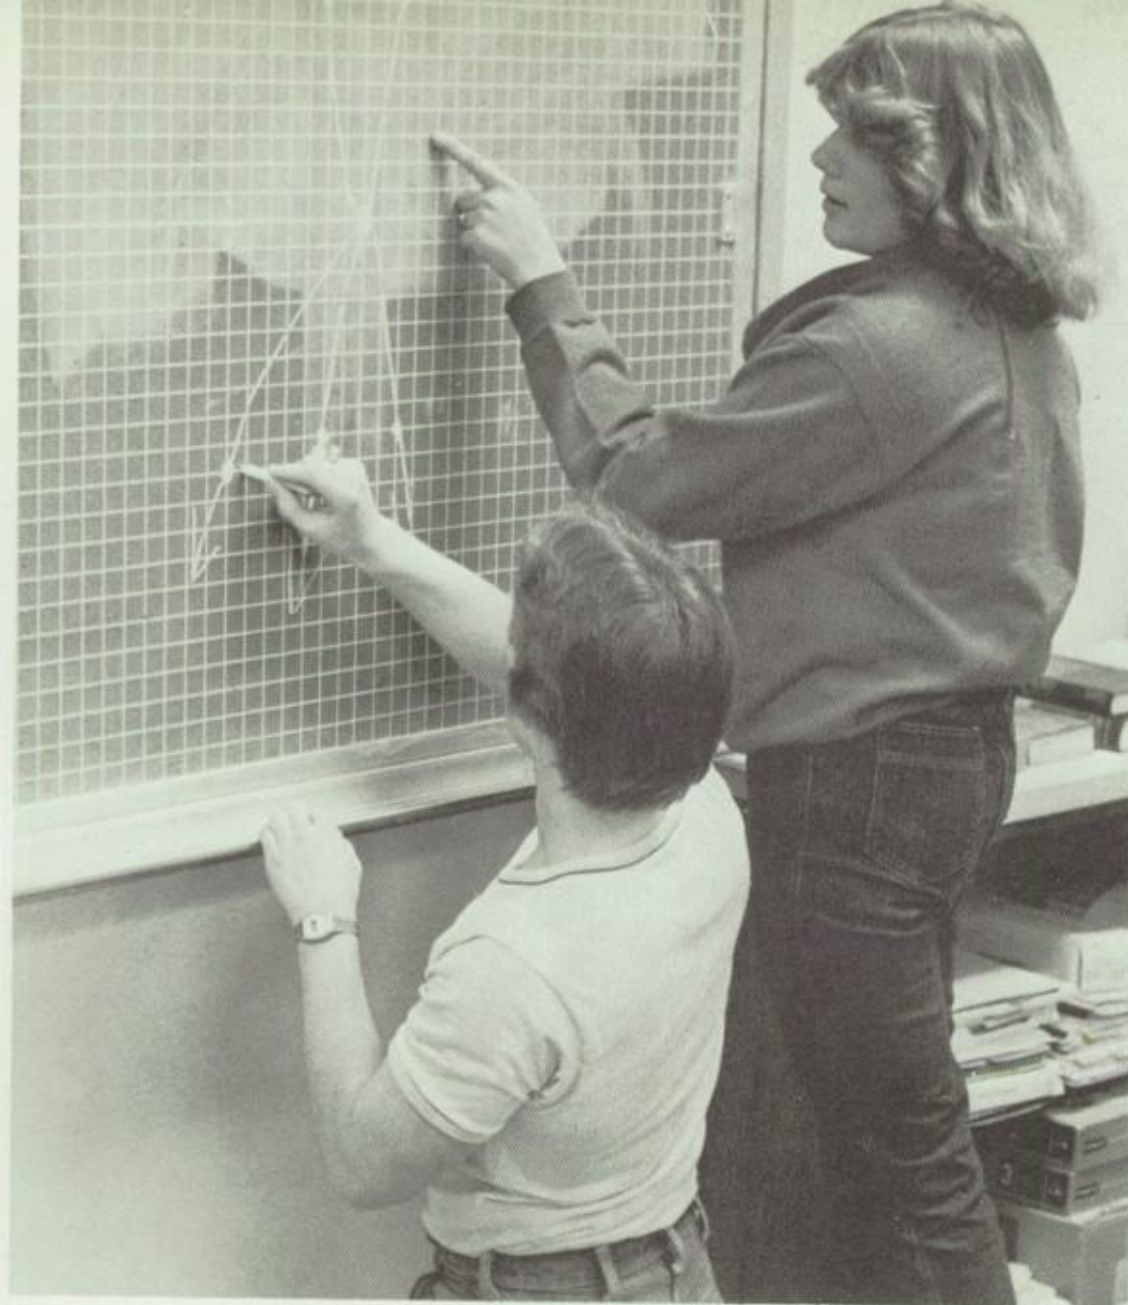

The trig classes combined learning with entertainment when they presented a play made up of mathematical terms. One character was late because he took the rhombus (wrong bus).

Students in Advanced Math had the chance to work with a computer linked to Radio Shack. They were taught simple programs and basic computer language in order to develop an original design of their own to be printed on the computer.

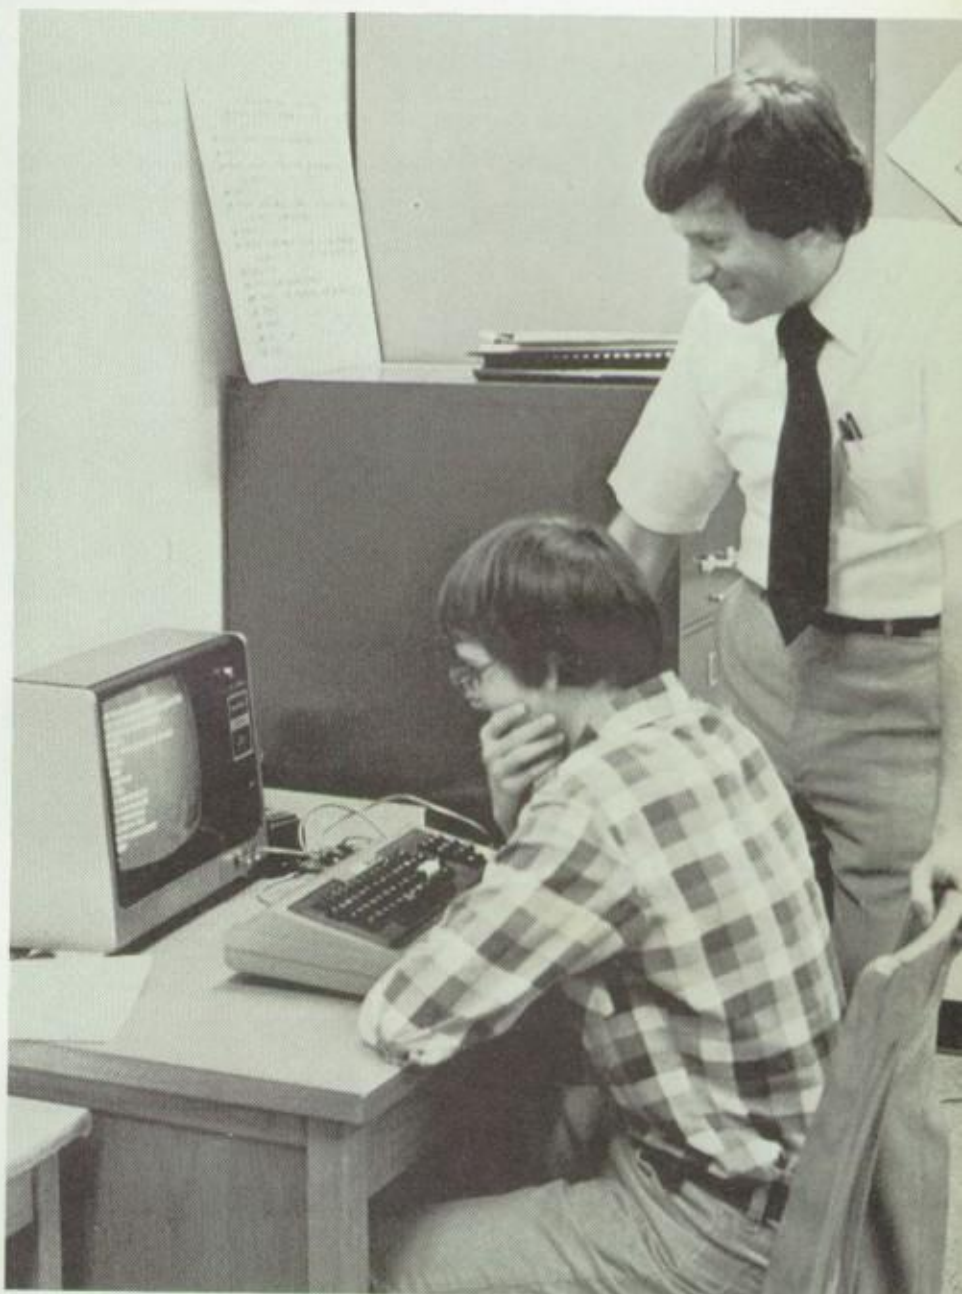

Although protractors, compasses, and slide rules were common sights in math classes, students found that a pencil and a notebook of paper were the most essential tools.

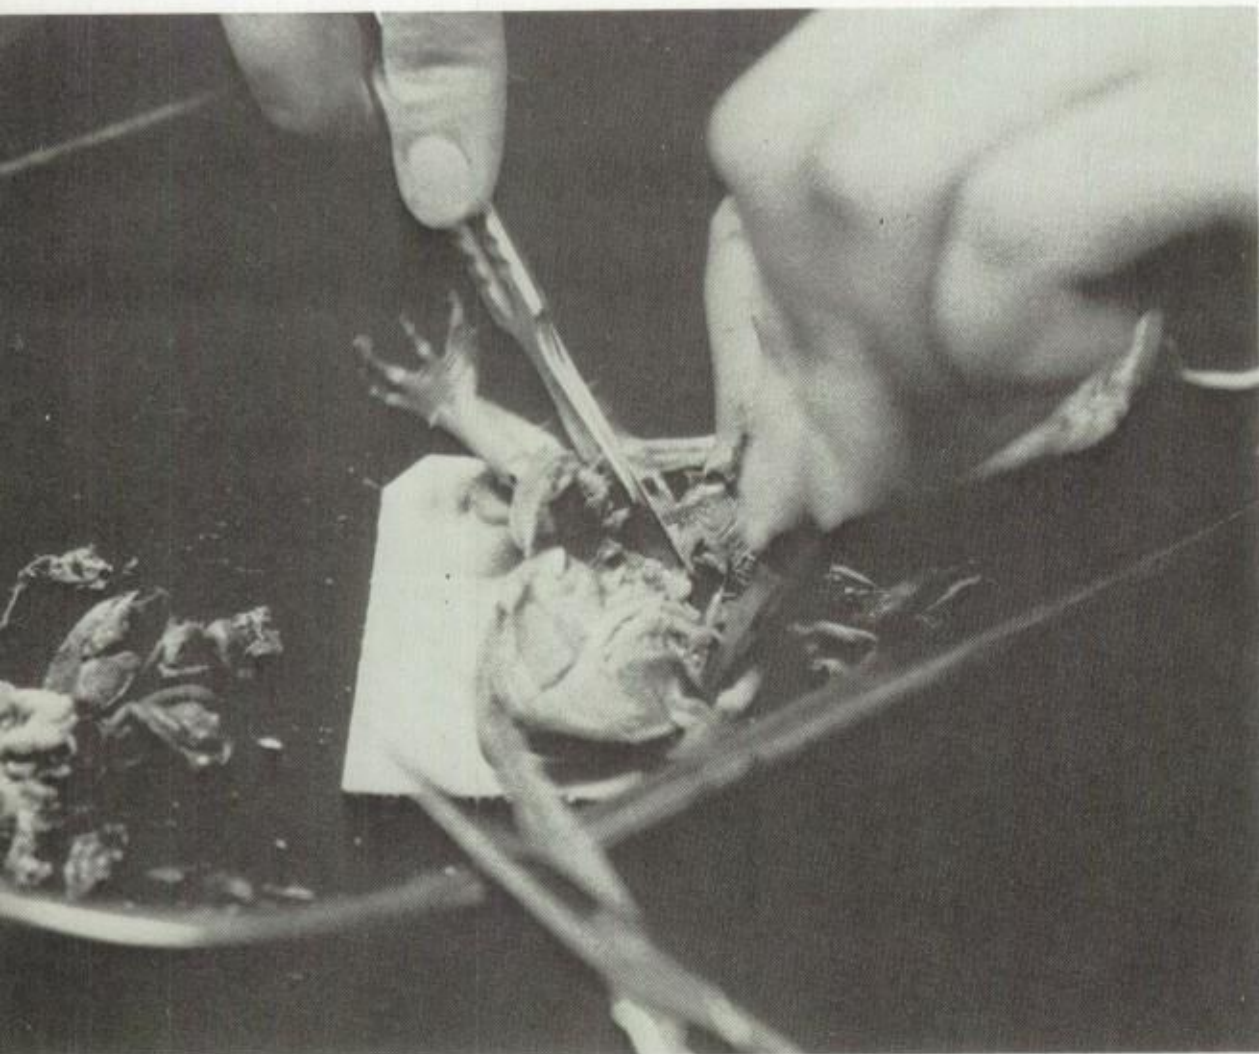

Far Above: Drew Eddy finds a protractor to be an essential tool for measuring angles in geometry class. Above: In geometry, Sheila McKean and Jason Beamer explain to the class that a triangle can have three right angles.

Experiments Emerge In Labs

After dissecting worms before lunch in biology, a plate of spaghetti just somehow didn't look appetizing. In spite of sometimes unpleasant smells, over half the student body took some science elective.

A new science wing and a total of eleven classes offered gave students an opportunity to explore various areas of science. Freshmen were required to take biology, a study of life. In this, students did small dissections, learned about plant and animal life, and studied reproduction.

Zoology followed freshman biology classes. This class did more complex dissections. They studied the muscular, reproductive, circulatory systems in the animals they dissected such as the fetal pig.

Physiology was offered for students to learn about the human body and its functions. Chemistry and physics classes relied on lab experiments for much of their learning. Chemistry students worked with different substances, while physics students worked hard to prove established theories.

Above: Lance Avery, Julie Baker, and Al Skinner work on a physics lab in which friction plays upon an object rolling down an inclined plane. This was one of the laws of motion that physics students studied. Labs helped students to understand the formulas by seeing the results that related to the laws.

Projects Add Dimension

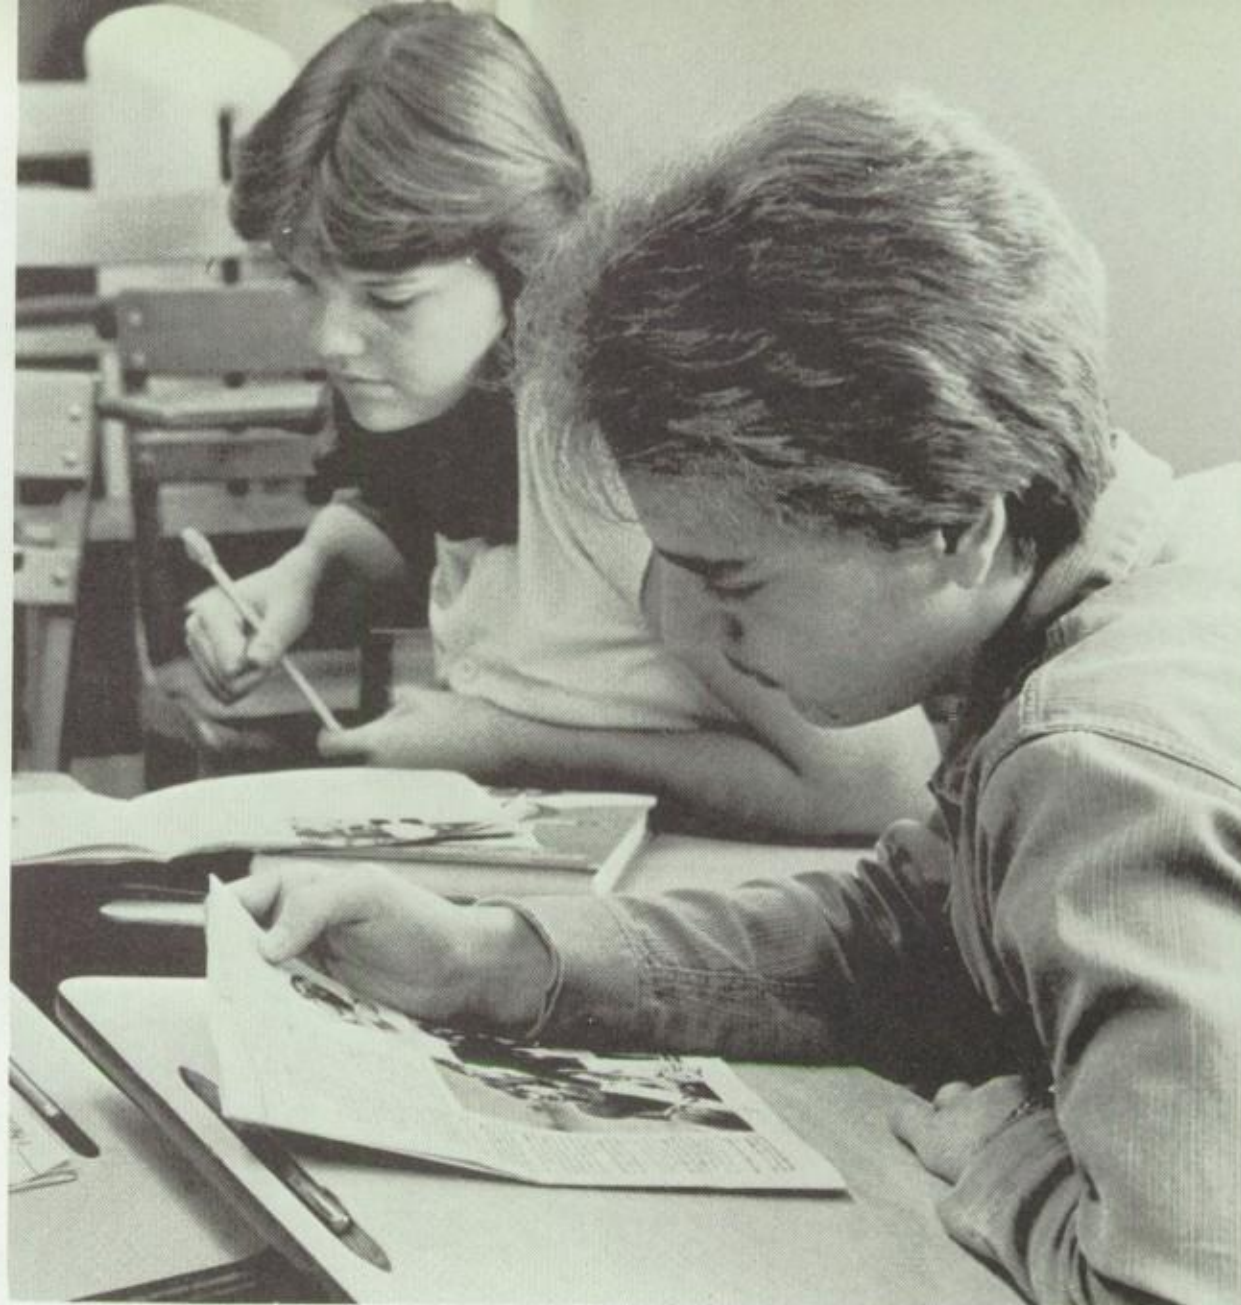

Dressing as the Greek god's was only a part of the rigid senior honors' English curriculum. "I didn't mind the gods, but the tests really became impossible," said senior Rob Neufelder.

In all levels of English, the students strived to achieve a better understanding of the English language. This was accomplished by reading literature and studying grammar. Junior honors' classes studied the development of English from Anglo-Saxon England to present day. Developmental Reading students bettered their reading by working with Tactics I and II.

Projects also helped to improve AHS students' understanding of English. Sophomore honors' English made traditional Jewish foods and brought in Jewish artifacts to supplement the book, "The Chosen." Creative writing portrayed famous writers and gave a first person account of the person's life. In these ways the students received a better understanding of the authors and of characters portrayed in the books.

Dictionary Proven Wrong

To The American Heritage Dictionary, "academic" means: of or characteristic of a school. According to AHS students, the word academic meant hours spent sweating over sentences, chewing off pencil erasers while combining like terms, and eating spaghetti after dissecting worms.

In order to graduate, a student had to take at least two semesters of a math course, two semesters of a science course, and six semesters of an English course. Offered to the more ambitious student were many electives that covered most any student's needs. For the more intelligent student, honors classes were offered by all three departments. A high grade scored in an honors class could help a student raise his grade point average.

Other electives were offered for industrious students. Classes in yearbook, journalism, and creative writing aided a student to get a position on a school publication.

AHS Gives Experience

The 1979-80 school year brought many new experiences to AHS. For the four foreign exchange students, AHS brought new experiences to them.

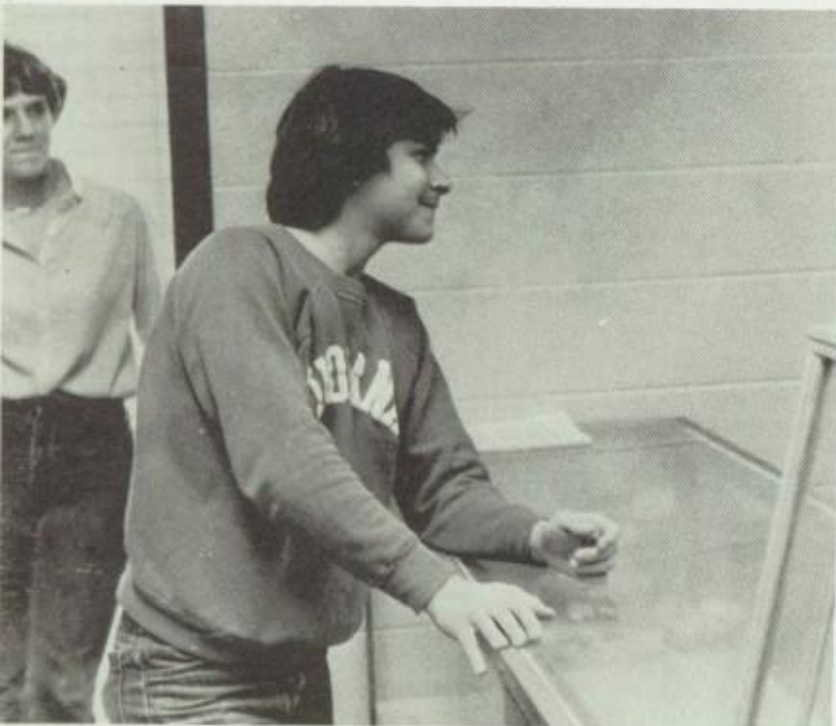

Mikiko Izawa, who lives in Kyoto, Japan, really enjoyed her stay in the United States. To her, things weren't too different from Japan. In Japan, students were required to take 12 subjects a day in school. At AHS she took a variety of classes of which algebra was her favorite. Her hobbies include art, music, and basketball games.

Onno Nierman came from Aduard, Holland. He was most impressed by the spirit that AHS displayed. He remarked, "My school has spirit but not like AHS." Onno's favorite class was art. He also enjoyed eating at the local fast food restaurants around town. "There are a few McDonald's in Holland," he said, "but I've never been to one."

Amparo Pazimino, from Quito, Ecuador, enjoyed Spanish, art, and government most of all her classes. During the year, Amparo became a member of the Spanish Club. She enjoyed her stay at AHS; "It's very different, especially the basketball games. They're neat!"

Another of the foreign exchange students who enjoyed the basketball games was Hector Azero. He liked the pregame and the Indian dance interested him. Hector said that size was the major difference in the schools. "Here the school is very big," he commented.

Students Take Pen In Hand

Quill and Scroll, an honorary society for students who took creative writing, publications, or journalism classes, was strictly for the student who was willing to "take pen in hand and write and write." Its purpose was to honor the many writers of the Indian, X-ray, and Little Chief, plus various free-lancers.

At their spring banquet, awards were given to many of the students, and the new staffs for the three publications were announced.

The "Little Chief" was sponsored by Mrs. Toni Shoemaker. The literary magazine was the product of many great writers of the English classes. Editor, Scott Maynard, handled writings and art work submitted by any students.

Society Honors Brains

Honor Society was a national organization in which it is an honor to be a member. To become a member, a student had to have a grade point average of 3.5 on a 4.0 scale. The requirements for a student to be in this organization differed in each high school.

Honor Society had a banquet in the spring for the new members. A speaker and musical entertainers performed at this annual banquet.

Each member of Honor Society was eligible to apply for the National Honor Society Scholarship.

X-Ray Reports AHS News

Classroom space was not the only thing to expand at AHS with the new construction. As the school took on a new look, so did the school newspaper, The X-Ray. The traditional four page periodical was changed by adding two more pages to it.

Since these new pages were added to the paper, an entire page could be offered to features and feature writers as well as give an additional page to sports. This was the first time in many years that this much space was allotted for these particular areas.

Another first for the staff was their own private dark room. They were also privileged with a staff artist. In order that more people could experience laying out a page, two editors were put on each page.

Along with the face-lift came a financial set-back. Being $1,500 in debt, the 50 member staff had to start an endeavourous attempt to raise money in order that they could pay off their debts.

Serving on the News Bureau staff was another journalism experience for X-Ray members. These seven selected students worked closely with Mr. Pursley, the advisor, to publish the parent/community newsletter, The Smoke Signals.

"The best book ever" was what 23 staff members worked their hardest to produce. Stricter rules enforced by new yearbook advisor Mrs. Barbara Miller left the 1980 Indian staff constantly busy meeting weekly deadlines as well as "big" deadlines. Each week students turned in journals telling of what they had done for the book that week. The staff was required to give 100% every day, and in this way a better book was produced.

Plans for the book began at the High School Journalism Institute at Indiana University. Four staff members, Cindy Sussex, Debbie Hofer, Jamie Reese, and Liz Callis attended the two-week workshop to refine their journalistic skills and apply these to the yearbook. The theme, "...building on a new image" was also chosen at HSJI.

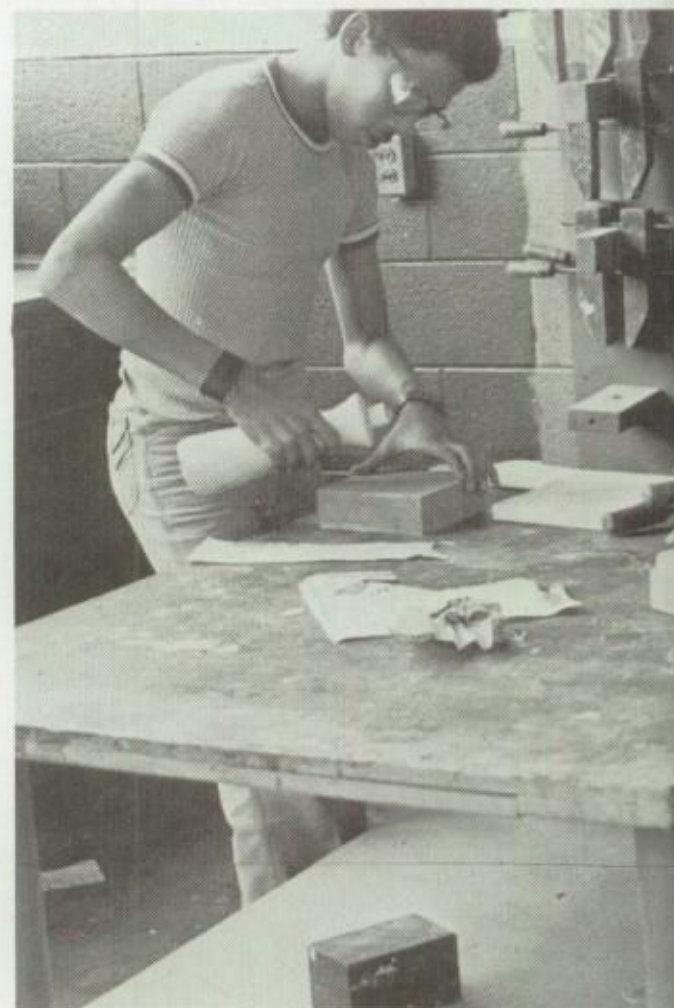

"Build on a new image with a 1980 Indian" became the sales campaign slogan for the book sales, which took place in October. The book price was substantially lower than any other of similar size, selling for six and seven dollars.

The 1980 Indian staff tried to build its own new image by hopefully starting a trend of higher quality yearbooks at AHS.

Shop Leads to Careers

Students enrolled in industrial education classes proved to classmates majoring in business and college prep that there were numerous ways to prepare for a career, including developing shop skills. Training in woods, plastics, and other industrial fields prepared students for college or a specific trade.

Drafting classes stressed intricate drawings for students heading for careers in engineering or design. Architecture I worked on designing sections of houses and advanced floor plans. These classes even went out into the community and plotted plans for buildings. Slides of architecture in different countries were also presented to students to demonstrate various styles of design.

Metals, woods, and plastics centered on making projects varying from hammers and other tools to wooden chairs. Graphic arts worked with silkscreens and hand set type creating business cards and tickets.

Although industrial classes differed in projects and curriculum, safety was the major point emphasized and was taught before any work with shop machinery began.

Mixing Work With Pleasure

Cooperative Office Education was a course offered at AHS, which gave students a better opportunity of the variety of jobs. These students got on the job experience by going to school one half of the day, and by working the other half. These COE students received high school credits while earning good money.

COE sponsored many activities to raise money for the organization; some of these activities were a bake sale, t-shirt sales, and a "junction" at the YM-CA with CHO.

Cooperative Health Occupations, or CHO, gave the students of AHS the opportunity to pursue their careers with on the job training. Some students could work more hours than others according to each individual's employer. This class enabled students to experience the career they feel would benefit them in the future. Some students planned to go on to college, but others decided to stick with steady jobs they already had. The health related field was very prosperous for young individuals.

Co-op Offers Opportunities

Students found that the Cooperative Vocational Education Program was one of the best ways to earn money and experience at the same time. The program offered elective courses in which juniors and seniors at Anderson High School could train for a future career under the close supervision of a practicing tradesman or a professional person.

Students had their choice of occupations and usually worked a minimum of 15 hours a week. Students who took part in these programs were usually students who expected to enter a full time occupation in their chosen field.

One such program was the Home Economics Related Occupations, HERO. Students experienced careers working as nursery personnel, cooks, chefs, waitresses and other various jobs concerned with home economics related fields. Students in this group also raised money for the organization by selling cowboy hats during the school year.

Sales and distribution oriented jobs were available for students enrolled in the Distributive Education Club of America, DECA. Working at department stores, clothing stores, and other businesses not only earned students paychecks every week, but also high school credits. Students were granted two credits for each successful semester of training and one credit for each successful semester of the related class. The students enrolled in related classes taught by cooperative program coordinated before they went out in the community to work.

Students at AHS felt that the co-op program was "a fun way of being paid for getting experience."

A Boring Class Is Restful zzz...

Now that you'd finished your next hour's assignment, caught up on the sleep you missed the night before, and totally ruined your folder with doodling marks, there were still twenty minutes of class left. It seemed like the teacher had talked forever and you were bored to death. What to do in a dull class!

Students who didn't get into listening to a lecturing teacher all hour found an assortment of activities to keep them amused in class. Confined to the small space of their desk, there was a limit to the amount of moving allowed, but one would be surprised at all that went on behind the apparent attentiveness of a student.

Passing notes across the room to a best friend was the easiest way to find out juicy gossip while at the same time blocking out the monotony of a teacher going on about the history of England. You didn't have to worry about being caught either, as most teachers thought you were being ambitious by taking notes over the material. Other students were less inconspicuous, however, by putting their heads down and sleeping through the hour. Sometimes girls tended to pull out their mirror and comb and ready themselves for their next class.

If all else failed, once in a long while, students may have actually listened to a lecture and might even have turned up an "A" on the next test.

Business Readies For Jobs

"Don't forget to space after commas," reminded the teacher. This was a phrase often heard by typing students. Typing was just one course offered to students interested in a business career.

Business classes offered a wide variety of courses geared to attaining a job. Skills such as typing and shorthand helped the students acquire secretarial jobs. When they graduated, accounting helped the future cashier or bookkeeper. General business helped the everyday person balance check-books, use credit, and borrow money.

Business law students kept on top of the latest consumer rip-offs and ways of dealing with them. Business law also offered solutions to many problems teenagers face in the area of verbal and written contracts.

Gallagher Resigns

On January 8, the Anderson Community School board accepted Dr. Harold Gallagher's resignation as Superintendent of Anderson Community Schools.

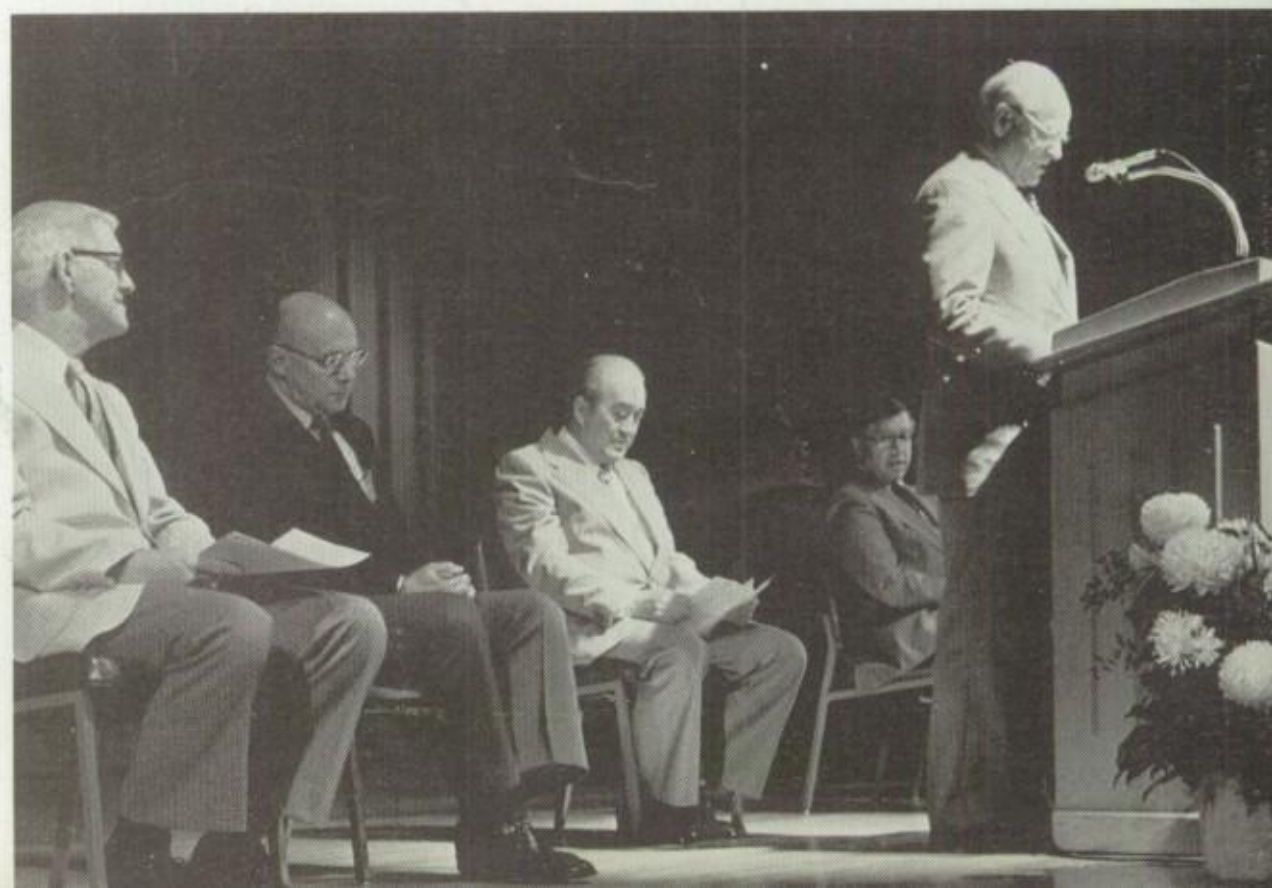

Dr. Gallagher originally planned to retire in the fall of 1980, but after suffering a heart attack in November of 1979 he felt it necessary to advance his retirement.

Before becoming assistant superintendent for elementary education, Dr. Gallagher was a teacher at elementary and junior high schools.

He also served as director of elementary education during his career. He received his Bachelor of Arts, his Master of Arts, and his Doctor of Education from Ball State University.

Dr. Gallagher's valuable experience and his keen interest in the welfare of the students and of the schools under his direction was evident. Under his leadership, many new policies, programs, and even buildings were formulated.

NCA Evaluates AHS

Some people didn't know it, but Anderson High School went through its own "grading period" during the school year.

Selected teachers and principals throughout the state of Indiana served on the North Central Associations of Colleges and Schools Evaluation Committee, whose job was to determine if Anderson High School met the required guidelines for membership in the NCA. NCA member schools were evaluated once every seven years. Not only did the committee evaluate the school, but there was a self-evaluation performed by the teachers themselves. Each teacher served on committees to evaluate specific departments in which they were members.

Anderson High School joined NCA in 1908, 13 years after the establishment of the organization. Membership in the organization assured students that credits earned at the school would be accepted by regionally accredited colleges or universities. It also showed to other schools and the public that the membership school had made continual advances and improvement of its educational programs, attendance, and overall student attitude towards the school.

The objectives of the NCA, according to its constitution, are "the development and maintenance of high standards of excellence, the continued improvement of the educational problems and the effectiveness of instruction solution of educational programs, the establishment of cooperative relationships between the schools within the association and the maintenance of effective working relations with other educational and accrediting organizations."

The North Central Evaluation Committee agreed that Anderson High School met the requirements very easily, with the exception of a very few areas that needed improvement.

Each In His Own Image

PEOPLE

How did the "average AHS student" spend an average Friday night? Some fattened their wallets by working at the local fast food joint. Others checked out the "submarine races" at Shadyside park. Disco-lovers did everything from Rock to the Hustle at the Junction of the Boy's Club. Rock lovers joined the multitudes at concerts in Indy.

Partiers made their way to IU to join in the fun at fraternity parties. Freshmen prayed that no one would see them as their parents dropped them off at Pizza Hut. Trouble makers egged houses while Camaro owners just cruised.

How did the "average AHS student" spend an average Friday night? At AHS this couldn't be answered, because there were no "average students".

Students varied from brains to jocks and each spent their Friday nights differently. However they chose to spend their nights, they usually made the most of it.

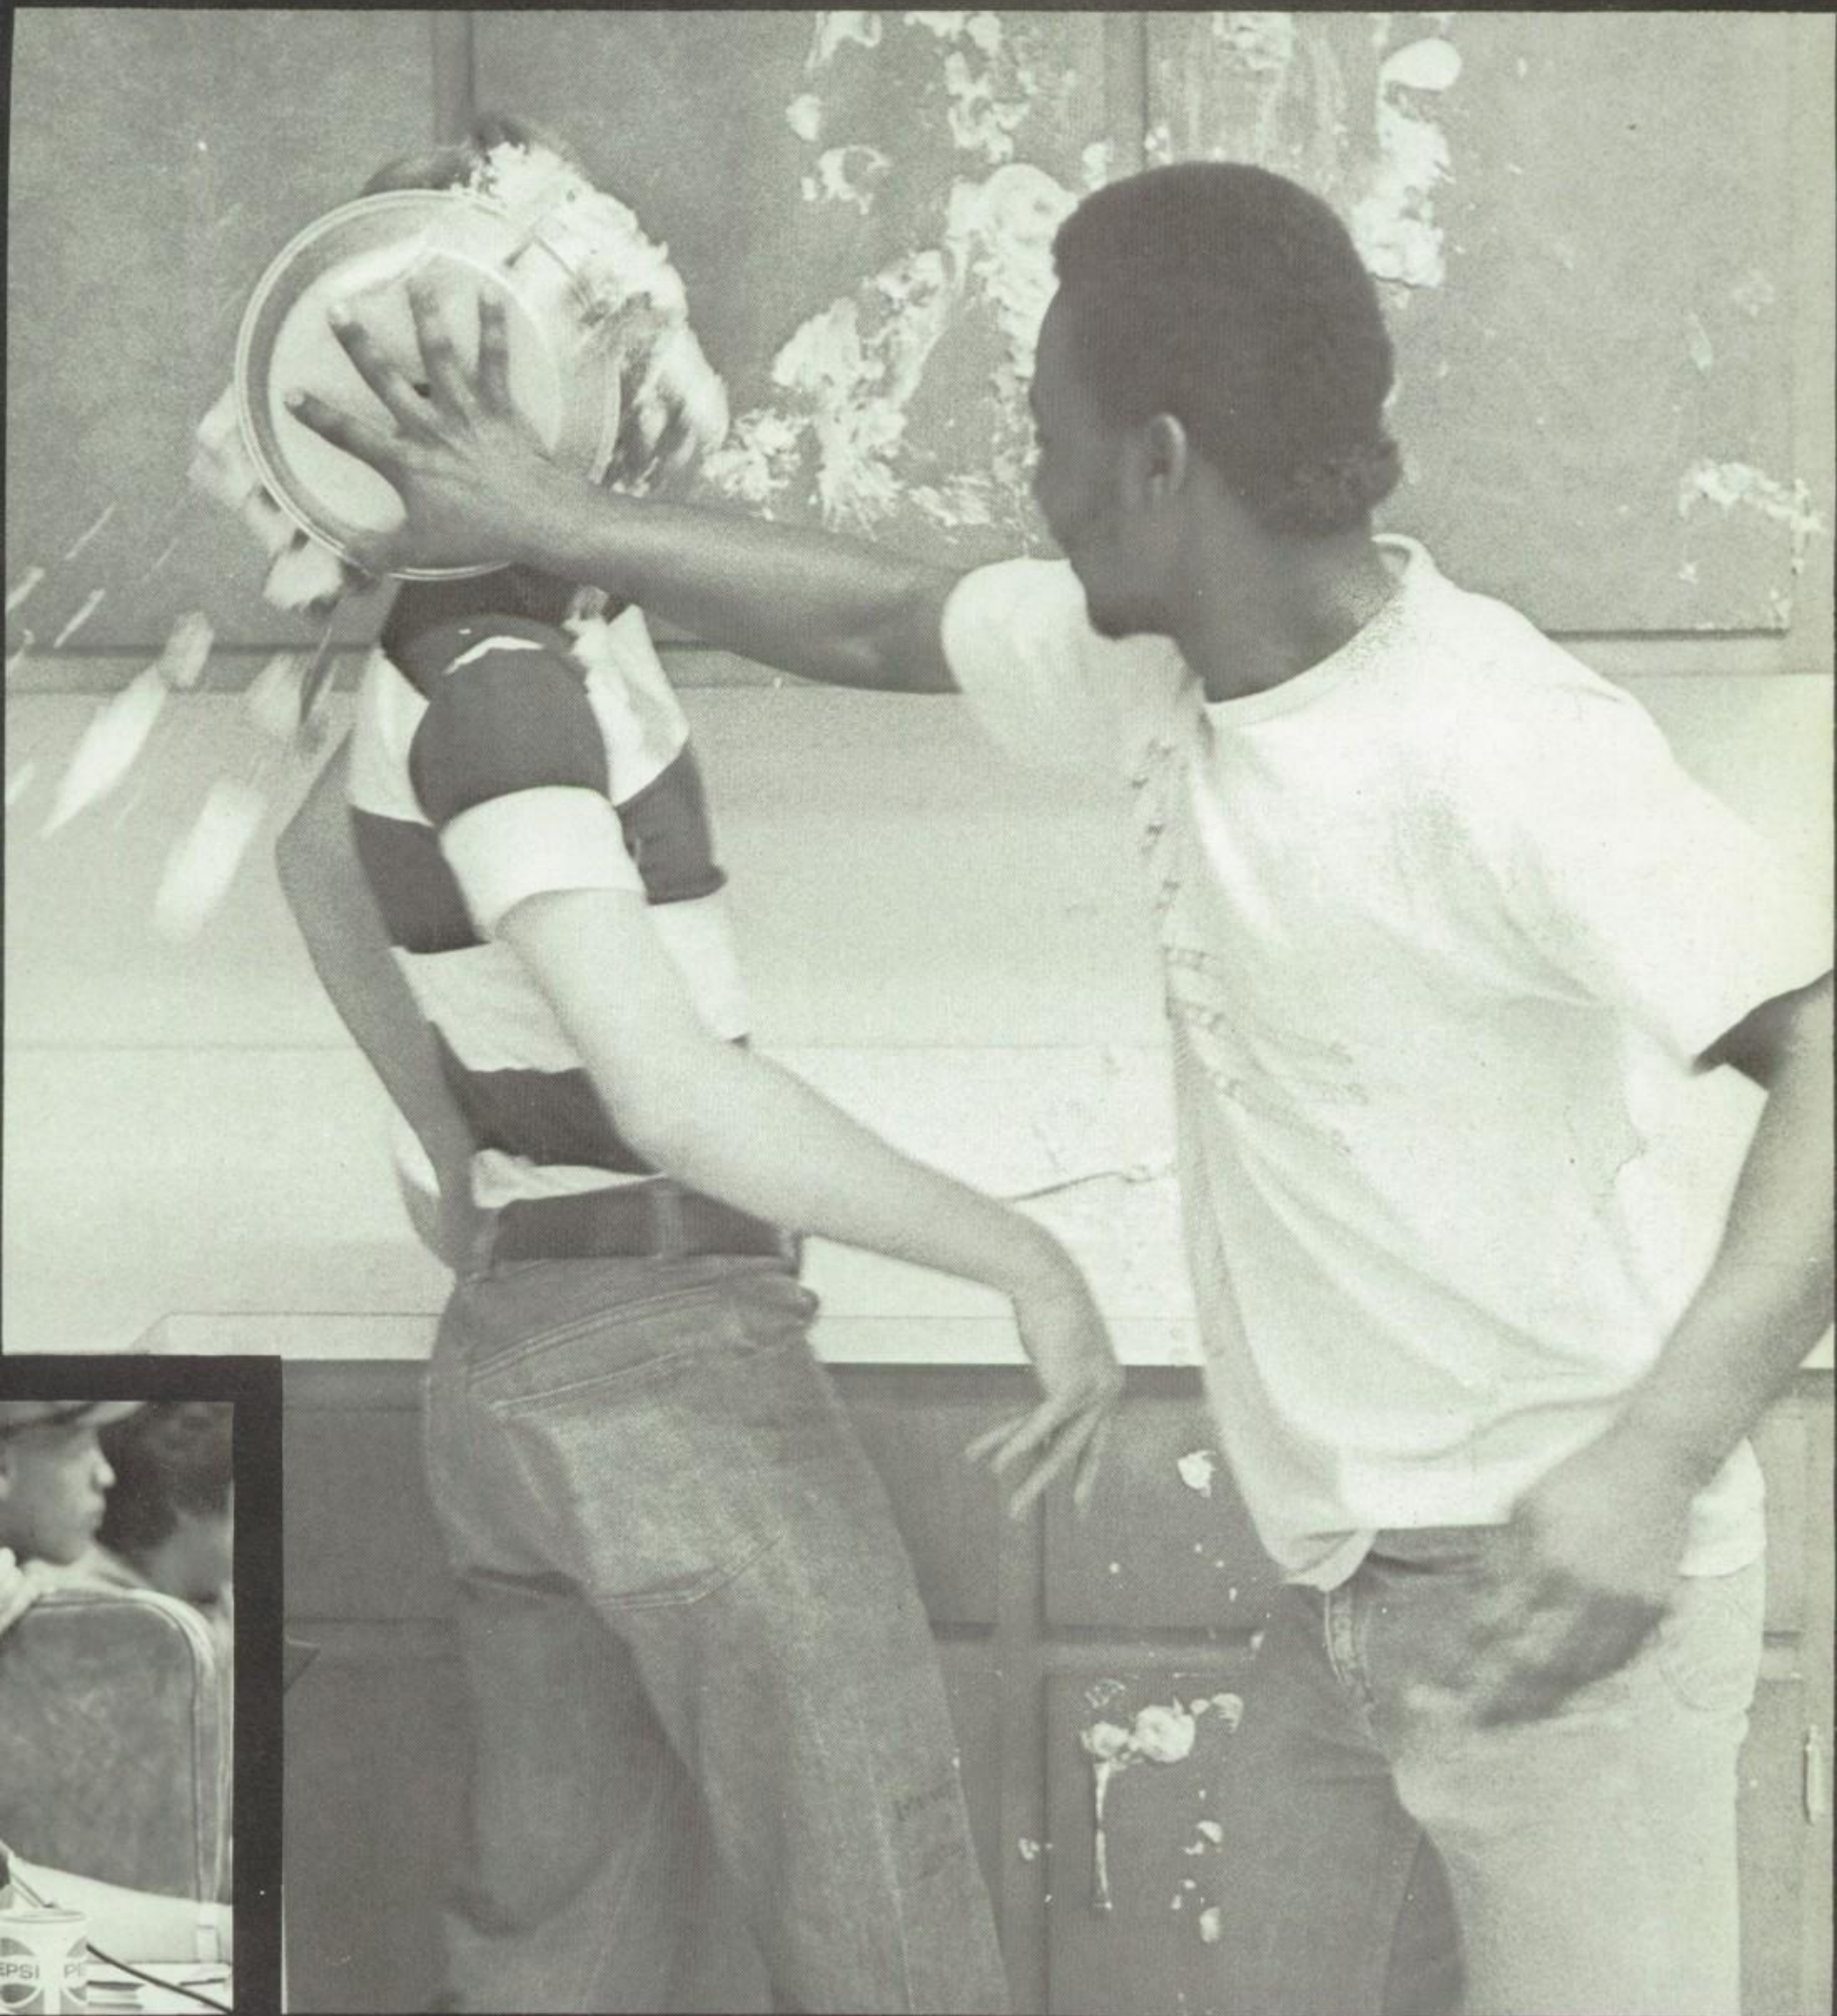

The many diverse personalities of students made the school special. As individuals students fulfilled interests that appealed to them. As Indians they brought recognition to AHS by excelling in sports, academics and activities. As young adults in a new decade they set lifetime goals, worked to improve themselves and began the endless process of building on a new image.

Seniors Do It Better ●●●●●●●

Seniors do it better, and the class of 1980 did it best. Seniors had a natural advantage over all of the other classes. After four years, most seniors figured out the secrets to surviving high school. They got to know the fastest ways to class - and the easiest ways out. They knew when to party, but they also knew when to study. The class of '80 showed this by the unusually large number of people who had high grade point averages.

The leadership of the school usually fell to the seniors. the class of '80 was the first freshmen class t attend AHS since 1956. They had an extra year to adapt to the responsibility of leading the school.

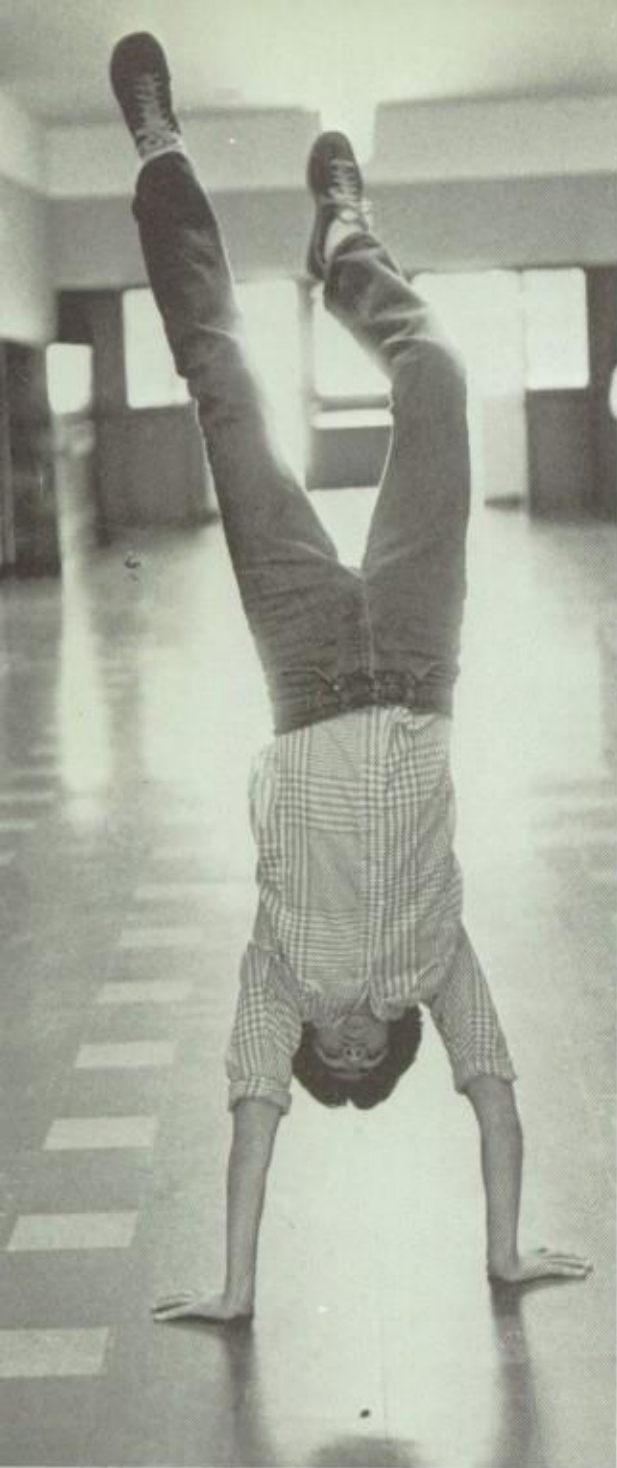

Seniors led the scholl in more ways than just age. Known for their spirit, the senior class won the homecoming float contest every year they attended AHS.

Each year their spirit and rowdiness was more noticeable at pep sessions and games. They set a good example for every other class to follow.

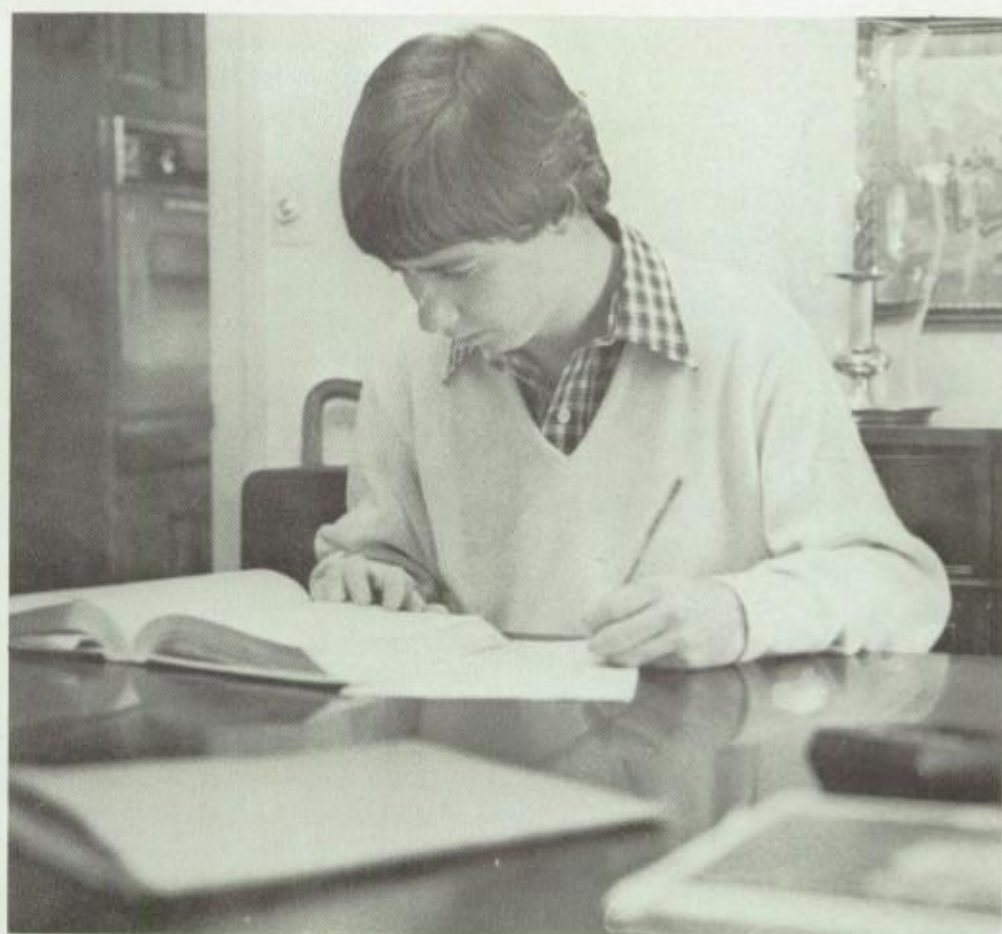

Many seniors excelled in sports, music and scholastic achievements. Once again, the extra year at AHS had turned into an advantage for the class of '80. They showed that they could adapt to new situations and still come out on top.

Seniors sometimes had to do it better. It was their last year at AHS. As May approached they attended pep sessions, convos, and ball games for the last time. It was up to the seniors to show the underclassmen what being a senior really meant. It meant putting everything they had into school, activities and getting rowdie. It meant learning the ways around classes, schedules, and teachers. And more than anything else, it meant that seniors did do it better.

SENIORS

Construction Keeps Class With Class Close

Below: Coach Norm Held joins his five senior starters, (top to bottom) Gary McGee, Dave Held, Shawn Teague, Dan Woshitz and Henry Johnson for a formal picture taken at Edgewood Country Club.

Plodding through messy construction, dodging new fire alarm doors, and shifting from one room to another was the four year plight of the 104th graduating class. The school was growing and the seniors witnessed the growing, and the pains.

Although the class was one of the smallest to graduate in the last ten years, it was big in spirit, enthusiasm, and perseverance. It also had brought about many changes in style. Dressing up was more than a once a week thing. Eating in the school cafeteria was much more common than going to the local McDonald's or Taco Tico. Seniors were more involved in sports and activities than ever before.

In spite of the construction, the seniors sponsored many successful activities such as Homecoming, with senior Karen Jackson being crowned the queen. Also, after long weeks of hard work, the senior class float received the first place trophy for the best float.

With senior class pres., Chris Oleksy at the head of all activities, seniors had a full schedule for their last year at AHS. The senior class trip to Kings Island, senior brunch, Senior-Faculty dinner theater and senior picnic were some of the activities planned during senior week.

The new building had finally been completed, seniors had gained more responsibility and had grown in strength, maturity and knowledge to produce a new image.

Class sponsors Mr. Jerome Foley and Ms. Kelli Smith were also a great asset to the 1980 class. With such a great team, they year of 1980 was a great success.

In Memory of Jeffrey Blaine "Chip" Myer

On August 4, 1979, Jeffrey Blaine "Chip" Myer lost his life in a one car collision.

Chip would have been a senior here this year. He was a member of the boys tennis team, a diver for the boys swim team, a member of Choral Club and Who's Who in American High Schools. He was also a member of the St. Mary's Catholic Church.

The class of 1980's match to Steve Martin, Chip was definitely the senior "class clown." He made his presence known to everyone whether he chose to go to class walking on his hands or to go streaking across the gym floor to enthuse the student body during a pep session. There was never a dull moment with Chip around because you never knew what he would do next. Although Chip was a fun person, he had his serious moments as well as crazy ones.

Chip was very special in many ways. Always a smile, always a joke, and always an inspiration to be happy. To those of us who knew Chip, we hold a fond memory of a crazy guy who loved life, enjoyed it, and most of all, really respected it. Chip was a truly great person.

Senior Superlatives Succeed

Excelling in selected activities was the goal and achievement of many seniors in the class of 1980. This class proved to be outstanding in both leadership and academics.

As Juniors, five boys, five girls, and two alternates were selected to represent Anderson High School at Boys' and Girls' State. This program which is held each spring at Indiana State University, is designed to give students a better understanding of how our government operates.

In order to be ranked among the top ten seniors in the class of 1980, a student black senior in the class of 1980 was had to have above a perfect grade point average. Their grade averages began at 4.054 and went up to 4.189.

Ms. Winnona Steiner, a 41 year old mother, returned to high school to further her education. Ms Steiner participated in all of the senior activities.

The highest academically ranked Marcia Willis. Willis had a grade point average of 3.4. She was also a very active leader in the class of 1980.

Many things were accomplished under the intellectual leadership of these and many other seniors. Because of these persons, the class of 1980 was not soon to be forgotten at AHS.

Seniors Reminisce

Wow! My senior year is almost over! I can't believe it. Just a few short months and college, here I come. That's probably what almost every high school senior in the nation thinks about when he or she is concluding that last year of secondary education. It's a good feeling, knowing that you will finally be your own boss and do what you want to do. But, you also wonder if you had it to do all over again, what things would you do differently or the same.

A senior year in high school is one of the best times in a person's life. Every school function or program you're involved with reaches the pinnacle of happiness. But, at the end of every one of these events, you think to yourself: that's the last time I'll ever do that again. The finality hits home and makes you stop and reminisce over the last four years.

After we won our last football game, you would expect to see all of the players whooping it up in the locker room. Well, some of them were, but others were just sitting there in a daze. The ones in the daze were the seniors. They just sat there and thought about all the great things and bad times they'd had. They'd remembered that's the last time they'll ever put on AHS pads and be with those same guys again. Then they just sat there and cried. This same reflection with tears occurs to any other senior involved in some school function. Whether it is sports, band or anything else, the senior feels this loss.

A word of advice to underclassmen would be appropriate. When you start your senior year, feel happy that it is the last year you have, but cherish and embed in your heart everything you do that last year. This really is the last time you will ever be with your friends and do those things, those special senior things again. (copy by Scott Maynard)

Juniors Look Ahead

As I sit in the classroom with nothing to do, I say to myself, "WoW!" I only have one more year to go before I'm a senior..

It seems only yesterday that I was just becoming a freshman at AHS. Being a junior is really important to me. Now is the time for me to be thinking about what my future plans are going to be, what college I will attend, and what I'm going to make of myself.

Juniors have more opportunities than freshmen and sophomores. For instance, juniors can attend the Junior and Senior Prom; whereas, the sophomores and freshmen can only attend the Snowball Dance. Fall Wind-Up and Twirp Dance.

Sometimes as I sit and think, I begin to feel sad, and I begin to wonder what it feels like to be a senior. Once I reach that point I ask myself: Will I be glad to get out of school; have I learned anything from four years of high school; and will I go on and try to accomplish those goals which I have set for myself? Anderson High School as a whole is a wonderful high school. We have concerned teachers who are there to help the students get a good education. As I look forward to my senior year, I will remember that all my years at AHS have each been the best. (Copy by Bonita Fields)

We're Half Way There

Well, I made it through my freshman year and I became a big sophomore. It was nice because then I could boss around the "little" 9th graders.

One thing I found out was that as we got older we got more privileges. When I got my license, one thing that I wanted to do was run around. Since running around costs money, I had to find a way of earning some of that green stuff; because as everyone's parents say, "We aren't made of money." Then the job hunting started. After looking for a long time, you may end up getting a call from an employer, asking you when you can start working.

At the end of my sophomore year I will have completed two years of high school with two years left to go. I guess in order to sum it all up, being a sophomore really means being one more year closer than I was last year to that phenomenal year of 1982, when I graduate and A.H.S. becomes a part of my past. (Copy by Darrin Britton)

Below: Sophomores Elisabeth Kistner and Jay Jackson ice skate in their spare time.

Freshmen Become Little Indians

"You must be a freshman!" How many times have I heard that comment from a superior-sounding voice? If I look lost, confused, scared, naive, or just in plain awe of upper classmen, I must be a freshman! Isn't it true, though, that the majority of people who look this way are freshmen? We're also the target of jokes and comments about being the little frosh. But isn't this an AHS tradition? We're the ones who are just finding out what it means to be an Indian and when we make mistakes, of course we'll get laughed at. But isn't that what being a freshman is all about - making mistakes and learning from them?

Our time will come, or so they say. Instead of feeling embarrassed and maybe even a little ashamed of being a frosh, why not be proud of the "different" treatment we receive and enjoy being one of the little Indians at AHS. (Copy by Lisa Herron)

Class of '81 Hosts Prom Looks to Future

Prom was the biggest item on the activities list this year for the juniors. Many committees had to be organized by the Junior Executive Council for choosing the band, entrance decorations, back drops and wall decor. The controversies over the sophomores and freshmen attending and trying to open AHS's prom was debatable.

Circulation of petitions occurred very early in the school year. Junior Becky Howard stated "Juniors have waited for two years to attend prom and everyone involved seems fired up and willing to make it a success."

The main source of funds that supported the prom was the annual junior coat check during home basketball games. Many Juniors took responsibilities other than just homework. They held down jobs, played on reserve and varsity teams and tried to decide on their future plans for college or in the working world.

The middlemen also found themselves coping with the PSAT, and SAT tests. This year was important for deciding on colleges and possibly visiting the campus on special days for high school juniors and seniors.

With the unemployment rate on the rise, many juniors had a difficult time finding jobs. As Tammy Hardin remarked "The only steady job that I could find was babysitting a few times a week!"

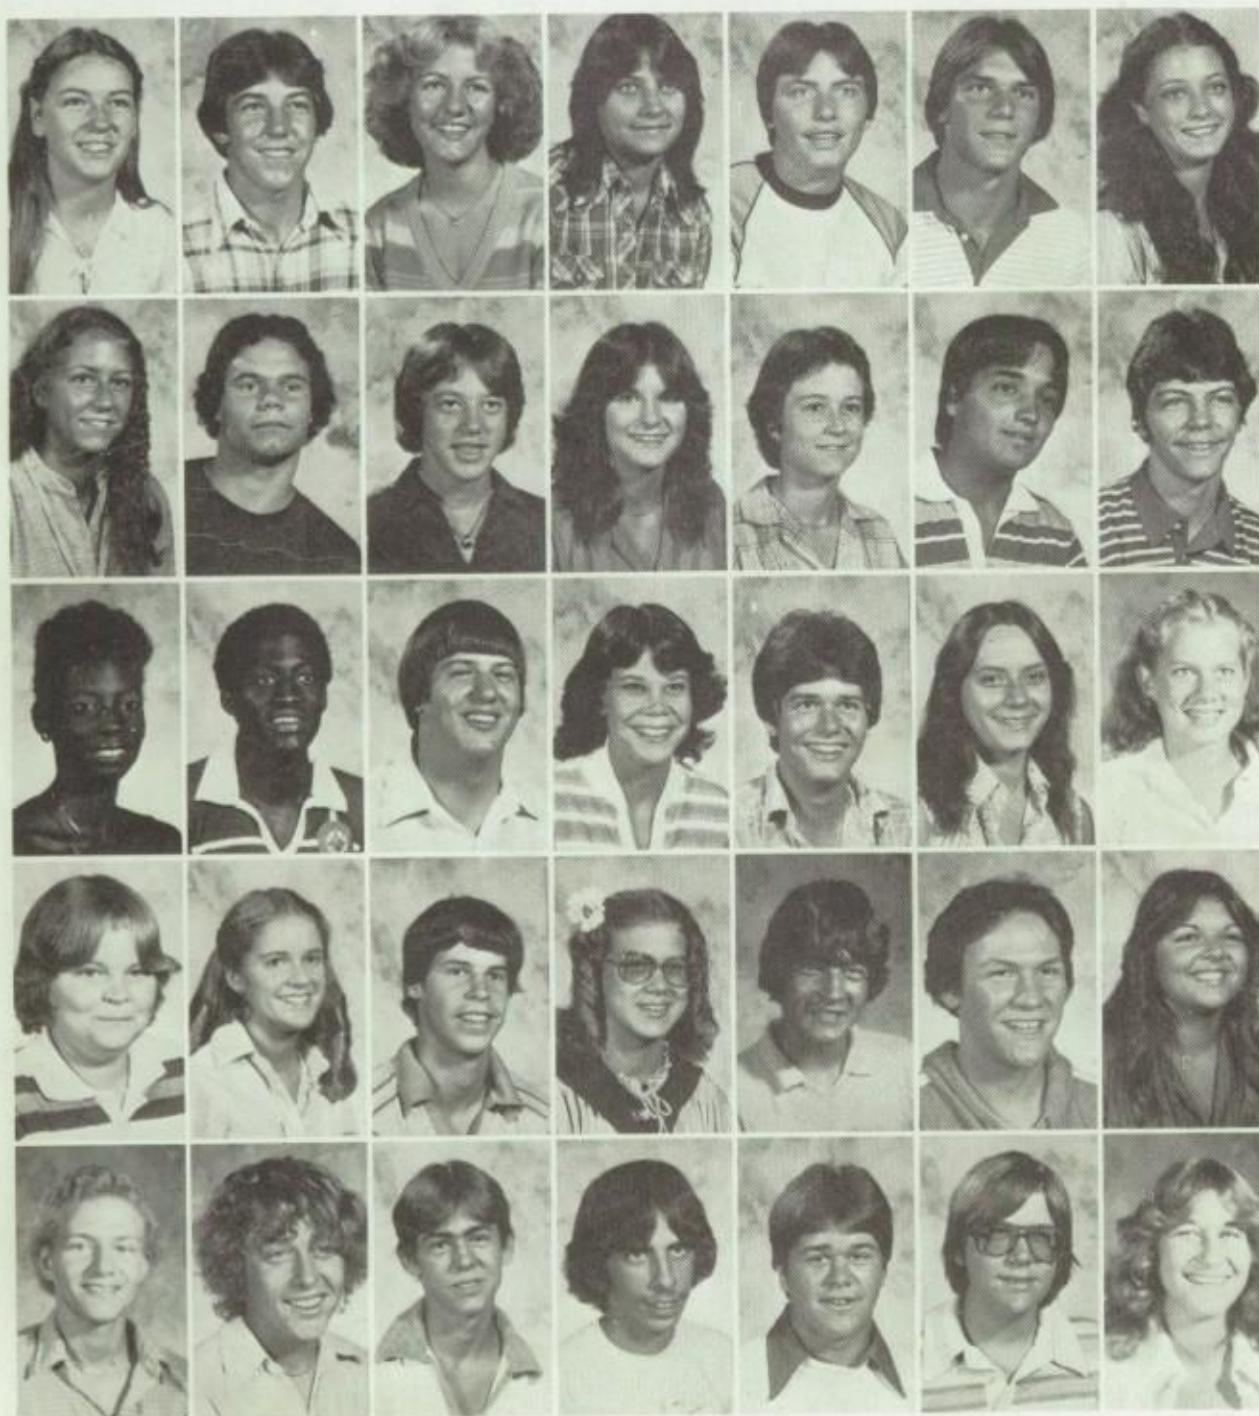

The juniors found that this was one of the most important years in high school and they were ready to become Seniors!

Joe Gordon commented, "This year I felt more involved, which makes me anxious to begin my senior year at AHS."

24 Sure Ways to Pass a Test

1. Hide notes on the bottom of your shoe or desk.

2. Be an assistant for the teacher and offer to run off the test.

3. Accidentally cause your book to fall on the floor on the page you need to see.

4. Drop your pencil and look at everyone's papers as you pick it up.

5. One cough for true, two coughs for false.

6. Casually ask the teacher a question at his desk while he's grading a different hour's tests.

7. Get the same teacher as your brother had and borrow his tests.

8. Ask a question in such a way that the teacher unknowingly gives you the answer.

9. Don't remind the teacher that the answers are still on the board.

10. Let your hair hang in your face so the teacher can't see shifty eyes.

11. On essay questions, answer in big words so it sounds like you really know what you are talking about.

12. Have a friend call in a bomb threat the hour you are supposed to take the test.

13. Use your book and say you thought it was an open book test.

14. When exchanging papers to grade in class, keep your own.

15. Write true for every question, you are bound to get 50% correct.

16. Get some paper out of your folder and check notes.

17. Write answers on your hand.

18. Have friends who have the class before you copy down the test.

19. Offer to grade the tests.

20. Ask a friend who is already done with the test to open his book to the page you need.

21. Be absent the day of the test and ask your friends what was on it.

22. Pray.

23. Be good friends with Al Skinner.

24. Study.

it all up to...

The dictionary defined prom as "a formal dance held for a high school class," but that description hardly included the excitement and emotional aspect of ones' junior-senior prom.

The fun began as the boy finally got up enough nerve to ask that special girl he had been watching all year for a date. After that was taken care of, the preparations started. There was an evening dress to be bought for the girl, and a tuxedo had to be rented for the guy, in order that the couple might attend in style. Flowers were the next item on the agenda, with the guys buying corsages or nosegays for the girls, while the girls were only required to buy a simple boutonniere for their date.

As the big event arrived, girls were found in their rooms all afternoon readying themselves. There was hair to be curled, make-up to be applied, and a dress and shoes to be put on. As for the guy, he had the chore of figuring out how to get into his tux. This usually demanded a great deal of time or help from his father.

Once the boy had arrived at his dates' house, there were flowers to be carefully pinned on. Embarrassment was a major obstacle when it came to the boys' turn to do the pinning, however, more often than not, parents usually stepped in about that time to save a lot of red faces. Pictures taken by ones' parents were included on the list of necessities before a dance. Parents always wanted at least one reminder of what their teenagers looked like all dressed up.

Another tradition was going out to dinner before the dance. Most couples traveled to Indianapolis to eat at a more expensive restaurant than one could find in Anderson.

After the actual dance, many students drove to a nearby lake for the weekend and stayed at a family or friend's cottage. The weekend vacation provided a suitable ending to the romantic atmosphere of the evening. It also presented a time to relax and a chance to don ones' jeans after a dressed up night.

Prom not only involved the glamorous activities, however. The decorating of the gym took a lot of time and effort on the juniors' behalf, and the clean-up of the gym afterward was handed to the sophomore class.

The junior-senior prom at Anderson High School was a perfect conclusion to an eventful year and the highlight of ones' high school years for some, but prom itself was never just a dance, it involved much, much more.

Driving, Dating Doing New Things Highlights '79 Class

"Dating and driving! I can hardly believe that I am finally getting to do something new!"

Driving and dating were only two of the anticipations of the sophomore students who wished to become more independent. The class of '82 found out that being a sophomore meant getting to do new things.

Many students participated in sport activities. David Moore, a reserve basketball player said, "I know that the reserve basketball team is the best in the state." Such enthusiasm was carried throughout the class. As Kim Rheem concluded, "The sophomore spirit at the ball games was really great."

The class of '82 became involved in many activities. "In Indianettes, being a sophomore meant being allowed to participate in contests during the year," commented sophomore Karen Maxeiner. Ross Briggs, a band member, feels that "the band raises the morale of the students more than any other group at AHS." "The Choral Club did an excellent job this year," remarked James Copeland.

The new facilities at Anderson High brought quite a response from the future class of 1982, who barely had the chance to use the old building before it was remodeled and extended. Gina Skinner, a volleyball team member, pointed out that "the new equipment and facilities helped the teams' morale." Bill Wood, still a little confused by the remodeling, feels that the school was better without the new part. However, Scott Green totally disagreed. He feels that "the new part makes the school less crowded and improves the appearance of Anderson High." Gretchen Irby commented how the Commons Area served great for the dances and a place to "hang out" at lunch.

Pranks Lead Nowhere

Only the beginning of October and the house already enveloped in white! It couldn't be snow, therefore it had to be toilet paper draped from the trees. Soap, eggs, and anonymous phone calls were also included on the list of popular pranks and practical jokes students played on each other for fun...but the pranks often led nowhere.

Some ingenious students went even further with their stunts, however, and changed the signs for the restrooms or loosened the caps on salt shakers so the next salt user had more than enough salt on his french fries. Getting caught was always a problem though, with the faculty somewhere near at all times. The Golden Rule also seemed to apply in some circumstances with students receiving in return what they did to another.

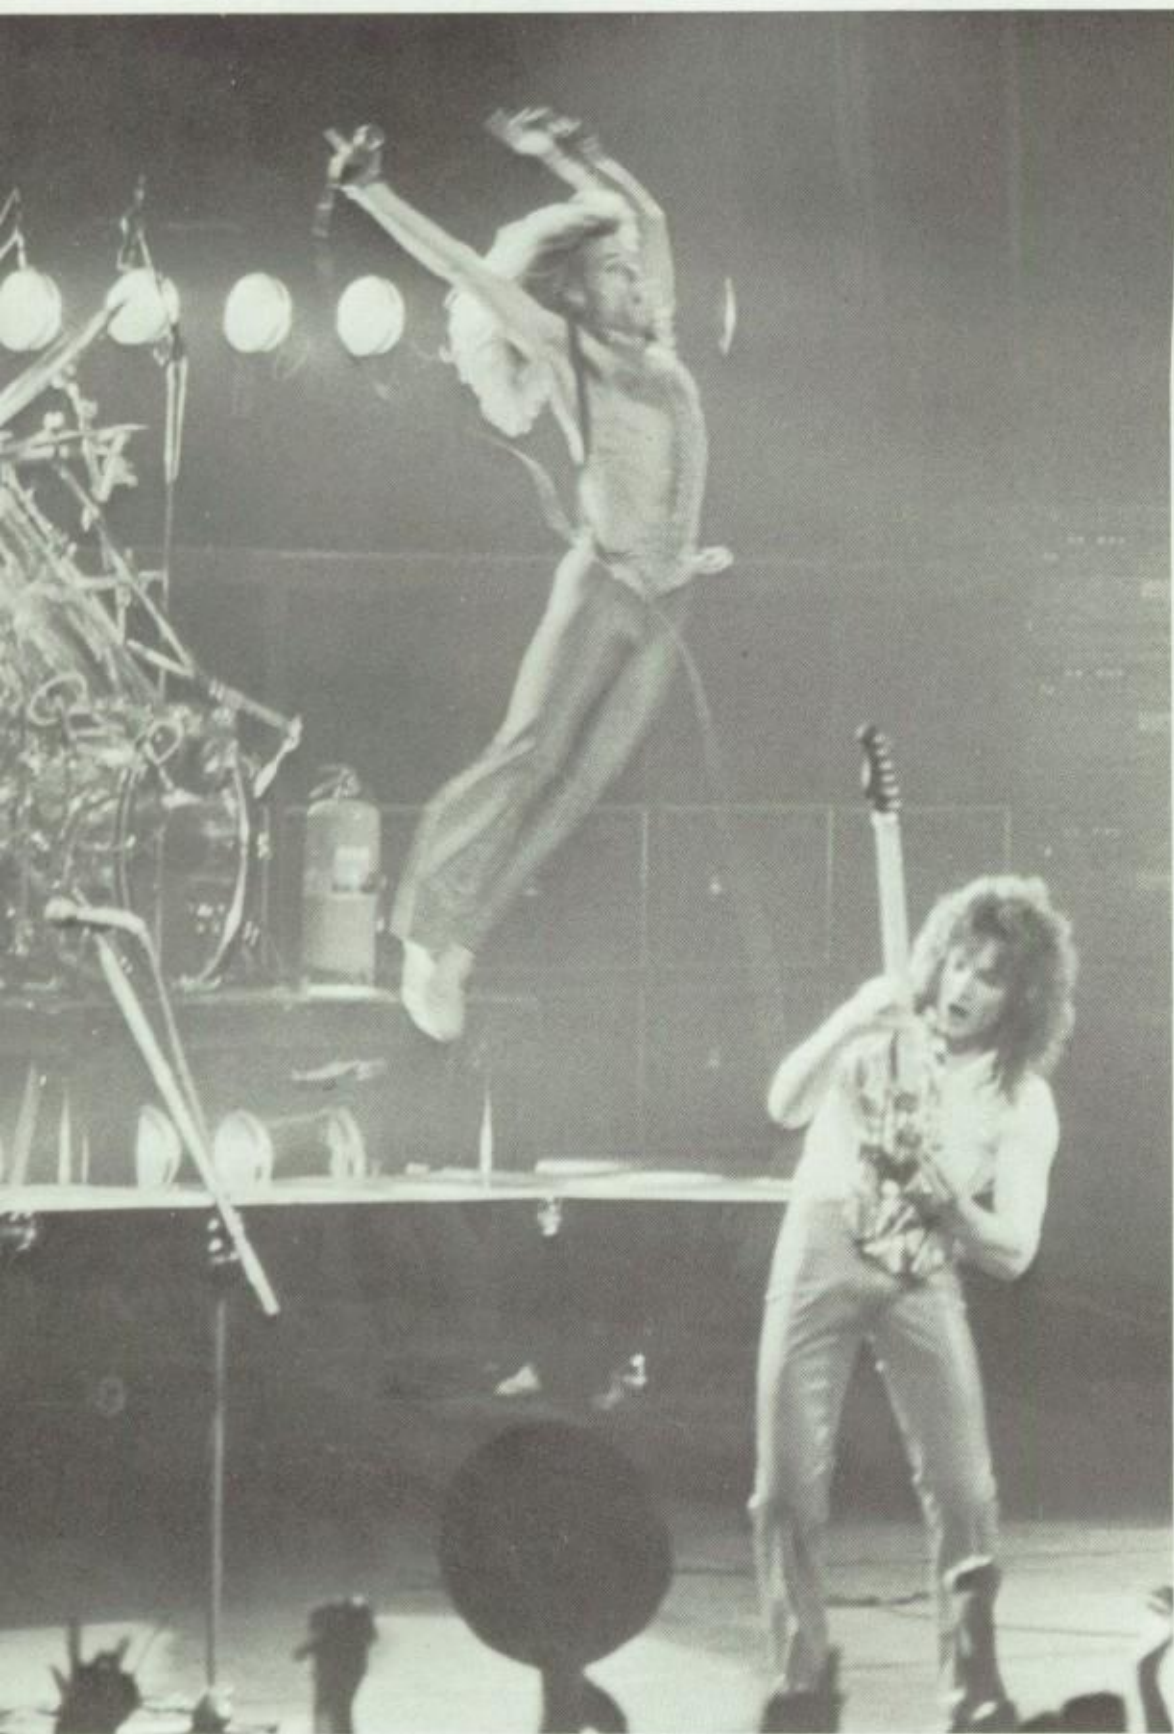

Halloween was the most popular time for pranks, but definitely not the only time. Students could think up pranks to fit any season, and anonymous phone callers were busy all year long.

Practical jokes may have seemed fun at the time, but often they led right into trouble.

Below: Maggie Gregory and Laura Herron are too excited about the upcoming "Kansas" concert to think of the high cost of the tickets they are buying at Sun Records. Right: Entertaining a sellout crowd at Market Square Arena, superstar Rod Stewart never sang an unpopular song. Far Below: Many students cannot wait to get to the concert to start partying, and the long trip to Indianapolis provides an opportunity to do just that.

...More Than Music!

The arena was in total darkness except for small spots of light as hundreds of people in the audience held lighters up high in the air. Although this seems an odd way to light a huge auditorium with thousands of people inside, this act signaled that a "rock concert" was about to begin.

A superstar rock group immediately appeared on stage, often in outrageous costumes, and took their places behind various instruments and microphones. The numerous amplifiers and enormous speakers spilled out an abundance of sound as the group began to play.

To those that have never attended a concert, the obvious thing to do next was to sit back and enjoy the music, but that was definitely not the whole story behind a rock concert.

While the band was filling the fan's ears with music, teens were very likely to be drinking alcoholic beverages or smoking marijuana. Although often there were police officers at the gates to the concert hall, teens continued to smuggle in a bottle of booze hidden in their purse or a bag of pot inside their sock.

To reinforce this point, when some AHS students were asked what they thought of a concert, many replied, "I don't know, I was too stoned to remember it," while others admitted the only reason they went was because it was a great place to "get wasted."

This fact backfired on some students, however, for a few parents would not allow their kids to go because of the large amount of alcohol and pot.

As the band walked off stage at the end of the show, the audience displayed their approval with pleas for an encore, which they usually received, but as the lights were turned on to indicate the concert was over, the fans had only their memories, a souvenir t-shirt or a headache in the morning to remind them of the spectacular evening.

Left: The "Outlaws", a southern jam music oriented rock group, uses a huge backdrop displaying their name and extra bright lights to create a spectacular stage. Above: "Van Halen", a rock group that was never intended for tame students, but for the rowdie ones, adds excitement to their performance with high kicks and jumps.

Freshman See AHS As New Freedom Venture

"I like being here because I have more freedom," commented Ronda Newton. More freedom was why many members of the class of '83 with 516 members, the largest class at AHS, were glad to be at Anderson High.

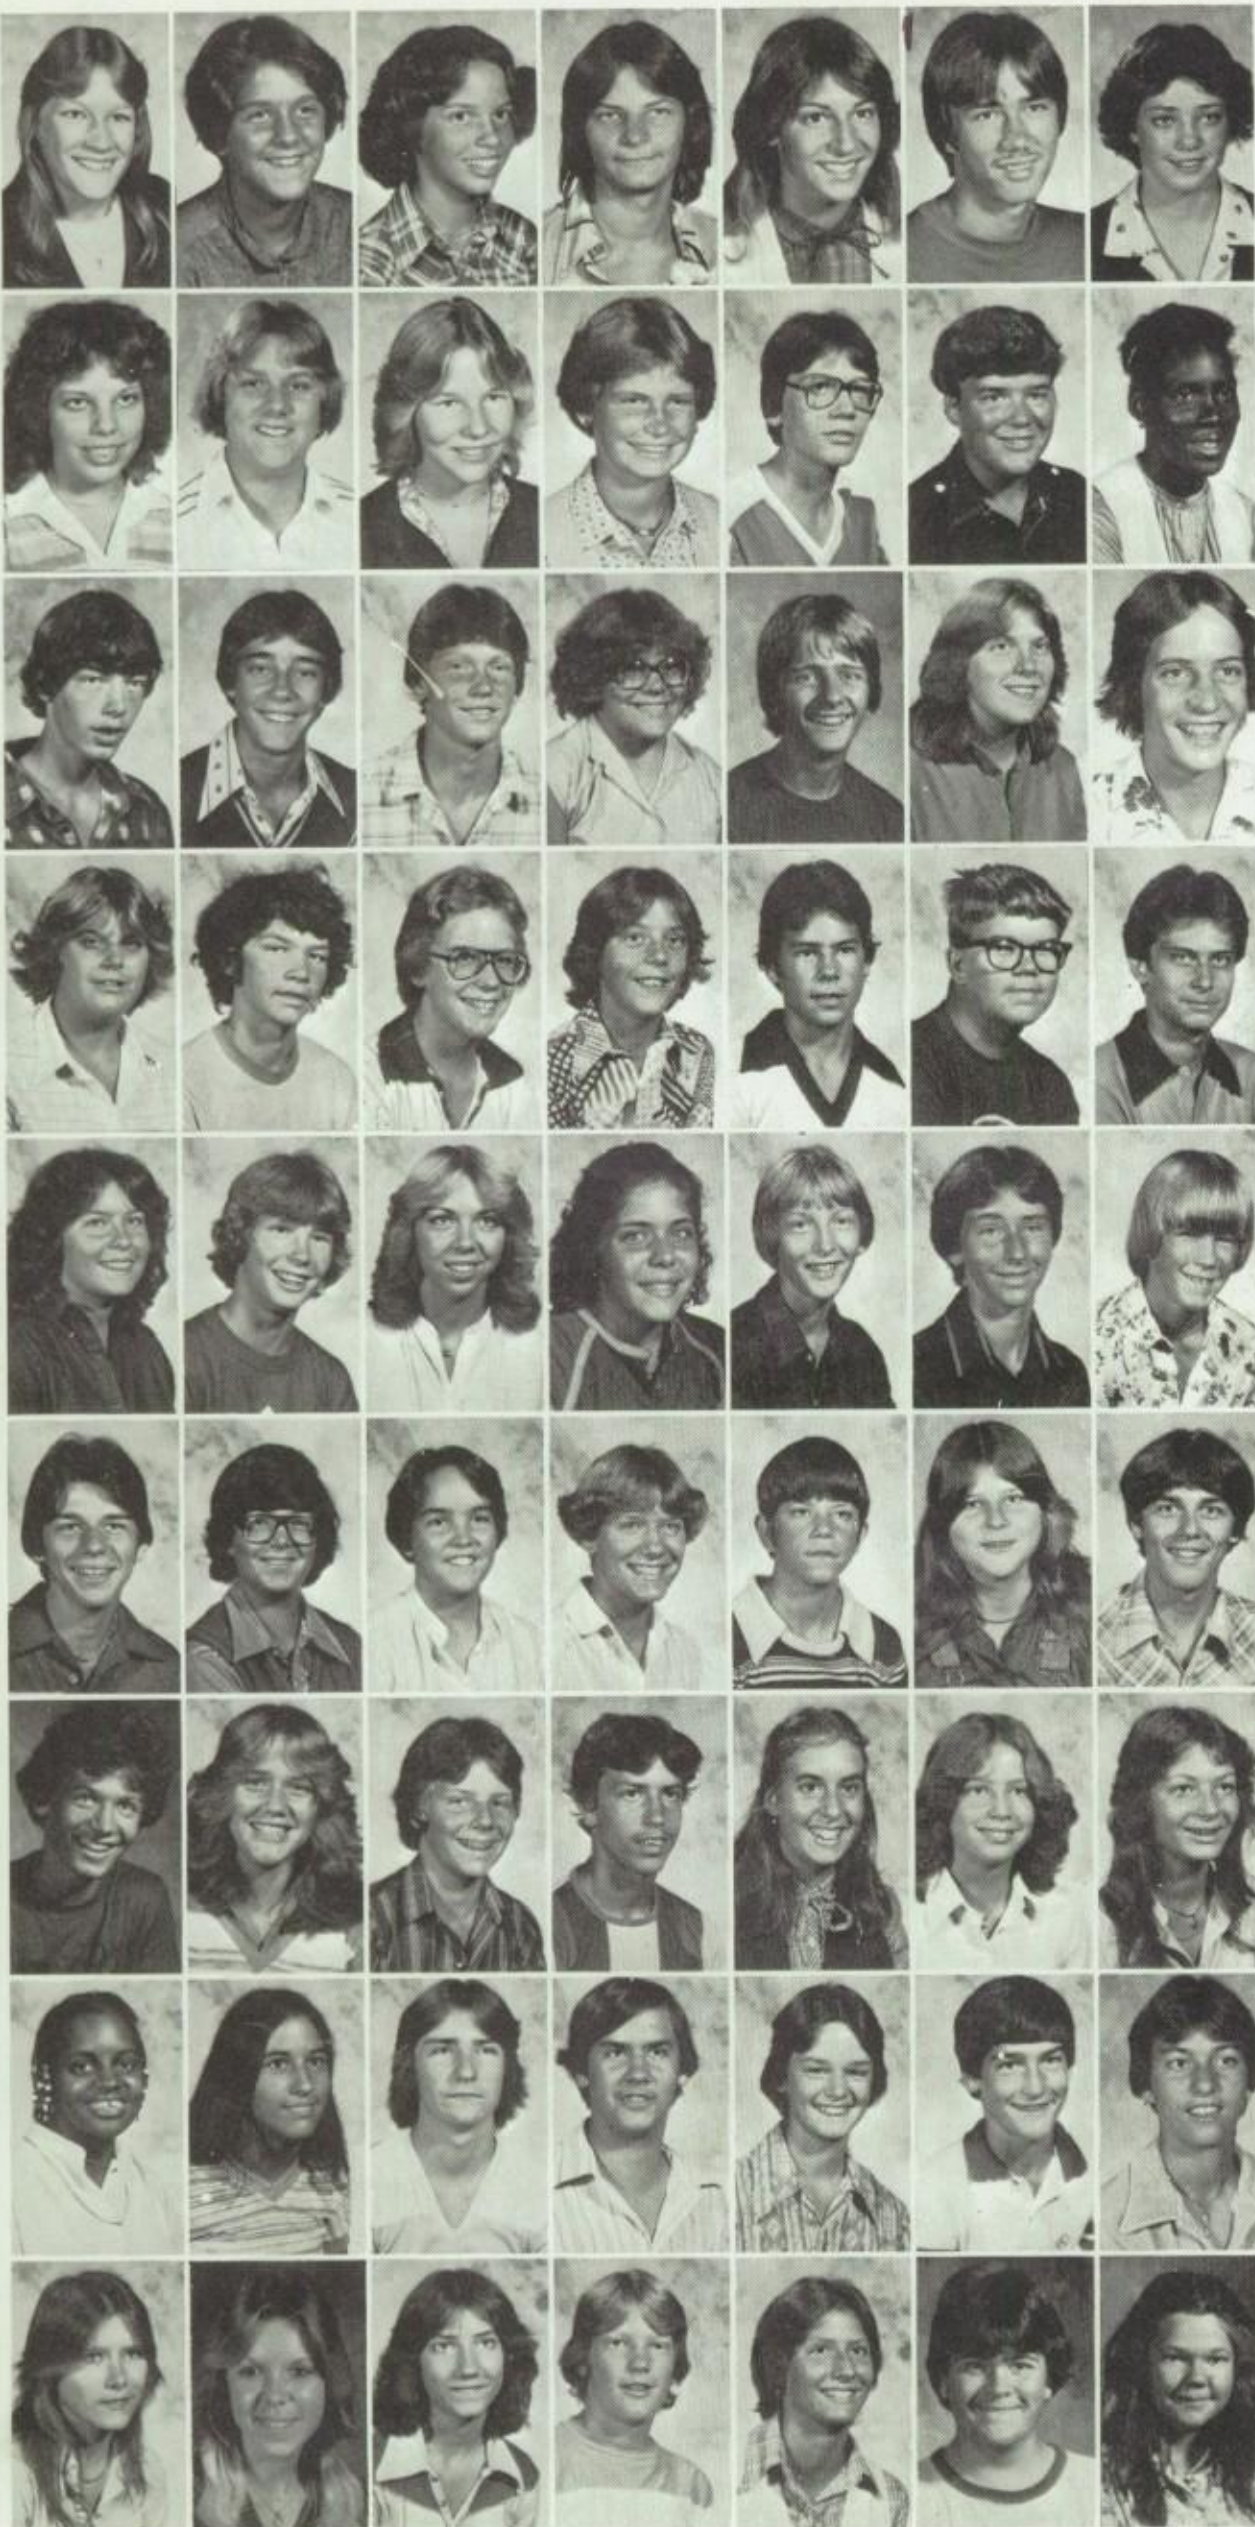

The size of Anderson High School seemed to be a shock to the freshman at first, but they soon found their way around. They learned that there were many advantages to the large size of the school. "Every time you turn around, you meet someone new," commented Carla Sorrells. Dianna Weever explains, "I have met a lot of new friends." Lisa Stewart feels "With an open lunch hour the cafeteria was not as crowded and you could see your friends."

Selecting classes was another freedom that the freshman class was allowed to experience for the first time. "By choosing your own classes you can take a class that you enjoy as a hobby, such as art or drafting," remarked Bryan Flecker.

"There were so many activities it was difficult to find time to participate in all of them," concluded Kim Brown. Sports were a part of the freshmen Indian activities. Dwight Sawyer, a football player feels, "it is great playing for the Indians. Scott Held explains, "I enjoyed just being a part of AHS student body." Ball games, homecoming activities, choosing classrings, dances and of course homework were all part of the class of 1983's first year of being an Anderson Indian.

Pizza Party Prevails

Broken glasses, salt shakers and pepper shakers, and even candle centerpieces were a common sight at the Pizza Hut on Nichol Avenue after a rowdie celebration of AHS Indian sport's fans.

Pizza Hut was the "in" place to go after Anderson football and basketball games, but because sometimes it was the "only" place to go, some AHS students became rowdie and uncontrollable as a result of either boredom or just because they had not quite wound down from an exciting AHS victory.

The result of the overabundance of spirit on the part of some Anderson students was that the tables had to be completely cleared to make way for the upcoming crowd. The waitresses also had a hard time of serving even the courteous customers with students standing in aisles talking to friends or trying to mooch a piece of pizza in order to avoid dipping into their own wallet. But some students avoided this hassle also by merely getting up from their seats and walking out the door with their unpaid bill still sitting on the table. The waitresses found they also had to work extra hard for the small tip they received from Anderson students. Instead of simply picking it up from the table, the money was more often found in empty coke and water glasses.

Students were found outside to be settled down by police when things got out of hand.

A Champ For All Seasons

SPORTS

It would take a life long fan to notice it, but sports have changed at AHS. It's true! Sports HAVE changed at AHS. The old adage "The only way to gain experience is through experience" was followed to the utmost. No longer did seniors control the varsity teams, the freshman and sophomores were right up with them proving that they could help the Indian teams win also.

Underclassmen use to learn by observation, but lately they were being rushed on and off the courts, fields, tracks, mats, and pools faster than the human age could follow. This may have been a step in the right direction. Avid football fans could hardly wait for the freshman team to reach varsity level. Coaches were beaming about how good they would be next year, and players were working hard in preparation. Although AHS was blessed with an amazing basketball team, sophomores were already making the tourney teams along with the seniors.

As the seniors graduated and left the future of AHS sports to those young enthusiasts, one couldn't help but wonder if the guidance of some of those veterans influenced the upswing or was it just INDIAN PRIDE.

Of course the freshman and junior varsity programs have to be accredited with preparing the underclassmen for the varsity levels.

Whatever it was, only a life long sports fan at AHS could notice the success the sports program achieved by building on a new image.

Youth Carries Tennis Team In 13-4 Season

Although Coach Chuck Newberry had a young and inexperienced tennis team, it was one of Anderson's best ever. Carrying a stunning 5-2 conference record, Anderson tied the best conference record in the school's history. With a 13-4 season record, the young raquetteers surprised everyone, including Mr. Newberry.

"I was really surprised with some of the players. Rob Dickey and Jeff Banker, our number one doubles team, has the best record, 14-3. Kent King had the best record, 13-4. I think he was one of the biggest surprises. I could send him out against someone who should beat him, and he would beat the guy. He came back from a 5-2 deposite in the third set against Highland to give us the win," noted Mr. Newberry.

Coach Garry Courter had a little bit of a different situation with the Cross Country team. He was expected to retain a strong team dominated by seniors, but Dan Woschitz was lost for the season due to injury, Skip Wile became ill and missed a major part of the season, and Tony LaMacchio pulled a tendon.

Despite all these injuries, the harriers raced through a highly successful season. Ending with 5-4 season record, they pulled everything together to finish second in the conference race and first in the sectional.

"One of our main goals this season was to win the sectional, and we did," expressed a seemingly pleased Mr. Courter. "We ended up second in the conference race. Richmond is just strong every year. I think my ultimate goal in coaching would be to win conference. The day we beat Richmond will be the day we win it."

Brad Jones, four year letter winner, returned to the state tournament and finished 18th. Getting Brad back to the state tourney was also one of the main goals of the team.

team his strategy for one of their meets. The team finished their season with a record of 5-4 and finished first in the sectional.

V-Ballers, Golfers Surprise Fans Despite Inexperience

Youth and inexperience were prevalent on the girls' golf team. As Coach Kay Clark put it, "This was a rebuilding and character building season for us. We had one returning letter winner and we weren't that experienced. Our young girls did a good job."

With only two seniors and no juniors, the Indians female golfers ended the season with a 6-5 dual meet mark. The main goal of the team this year was to get to the regional, and that they did. Karen Gahimer shot low score for the team during sectional, taking second place individually.

"This year was the worst, so far as wins and losses, in the seven year history of girls' golf at AHS. But if you think about it, we really didn't have a bad season," stated Mrs. Clark.

Youth and inexperience also played a key role on the girls' volleyball squad. Coach Nancy Durr expressed her displeasure with the season ending mark of 11-11.

"We simply didn't play up to our potential," said Miss Durr. "We would go in practice and do everything correct, but when we got in a game, we wouldn't do it."

With only two returning seniors, Miss Durr knew the team had its work cut out for it at the start of the season. Despite the handicap of inexperience, the girls played well all through the season. The only problem was a touch of inconsistency.

Junior Lori Ball, one of four returning players with varsity experience, was voted all NCC. She leads a group of youngsters that includes five juniors and six sophomores returning.

Miss Durr showed an overflow of enthusiasm for next year. "The girls are already excited about next year. We will be THE team in the county with the experience for once. I'm really excited."

Gridders Set Sites To Future

"Winning is great, but if you play the best you can, that's all that can be expected," stated Mr. Don DeSalle, head coach at AHS.

Mr. DeSalle didn't see much more than he expected as the varsity ended their season with a 4-6 mark. Although they were not noted for a penchant for victory, the Tribe displayed city-wide superiority by beating the other two schools in Anderson, giving them the city championship.

Youth and inexperience struck the football team as well as the other sports at AHS. There were a lot of rookies and a lot of people playing unfamiliar positions. These people were helped by the skeleton crew of seasoned veterans that remained from the previous year.

"We should have won a few more games," noted Mr. DeSalle. "Our young kids just weren't as mentally or emotionally ready. It's harder than if you are used to the experience of playing varsity football."

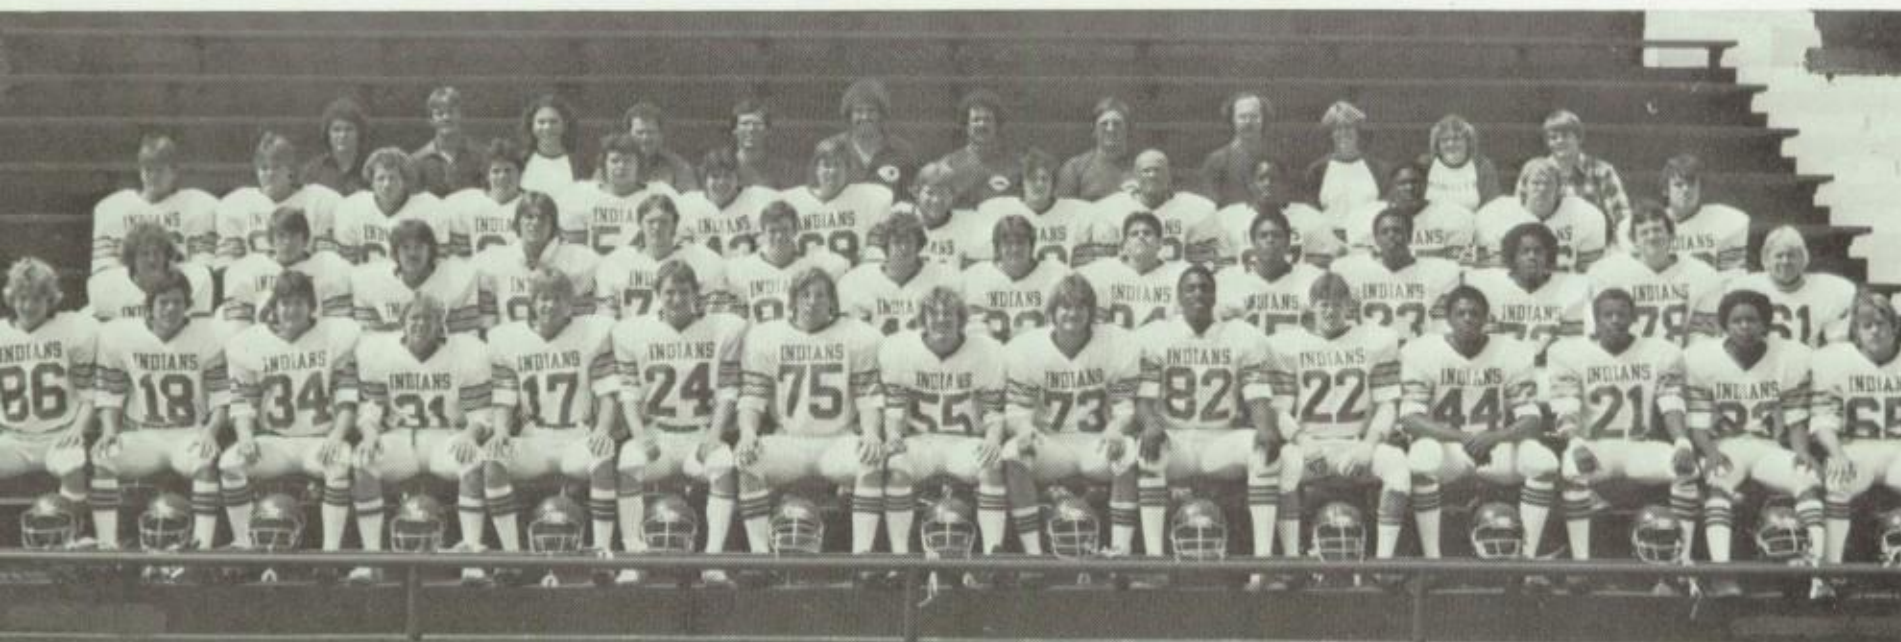

One youngster, junior Derrick Wilkerson, was playing football for the first time in two years. Due to his excellent play, he was awarded with being voted to the All-County team.

"With the youngsters we had this year, we should do well next year," said Coach DeSalle.

JV Suffers Nightmare Season

"Lack of personnel." These three words describe the reserve football situation exactly.

"We had to forfeit the first game of the season," said Coach Phil "P.T." Morgan. "In the nine years that I have been involved with the Anderson sports system, this is the first time that I know of that an Anderson High School team - not just football, but any team - has had to forfeit a game."

Due to the lack of players, the reserve squad turned out a less-than average year, but Coach Morgan still had something to say about their performance.

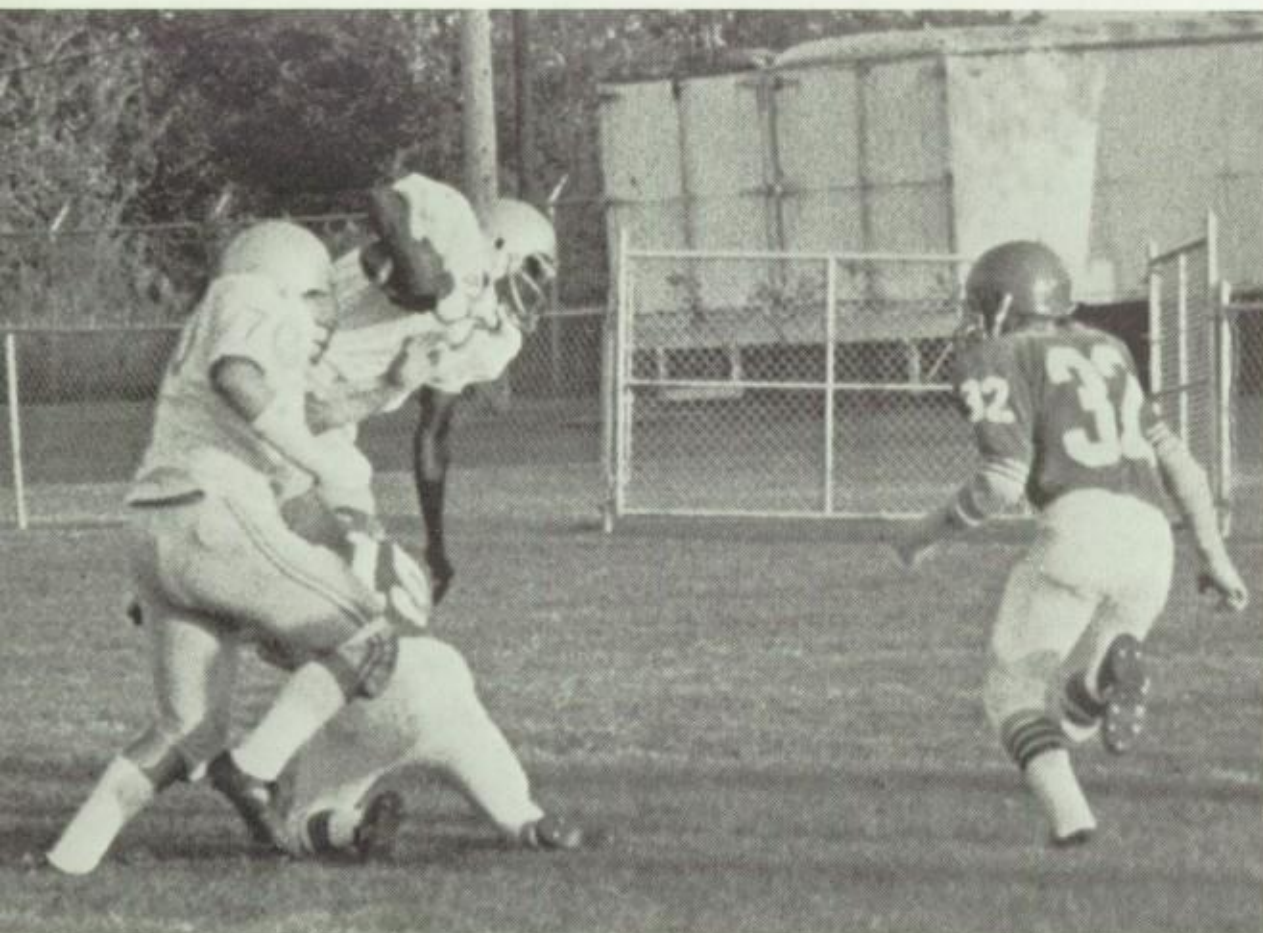

"Those kids would go up against a team that was down right better than they were, but when they lost, they would really feel it. They never really quit, and they showed strong desire. I'm really kind of proud of them."

A strong Anderson football program cannot be far off in the future after the recent season display of the freshman team. After a rocky start with a loss to Kokomo (the only team to score against them all year), the young tribesmen took six straight games to finish the season with a 6-1 mark.

First year coaches Mr. Steve Porter and Mr. Glen Nelson co-piloted the squad to their fine showing. Mr. Porter emphasized that "when you win, it's a 30 man effort, not just four or five guys deserve all the credit."

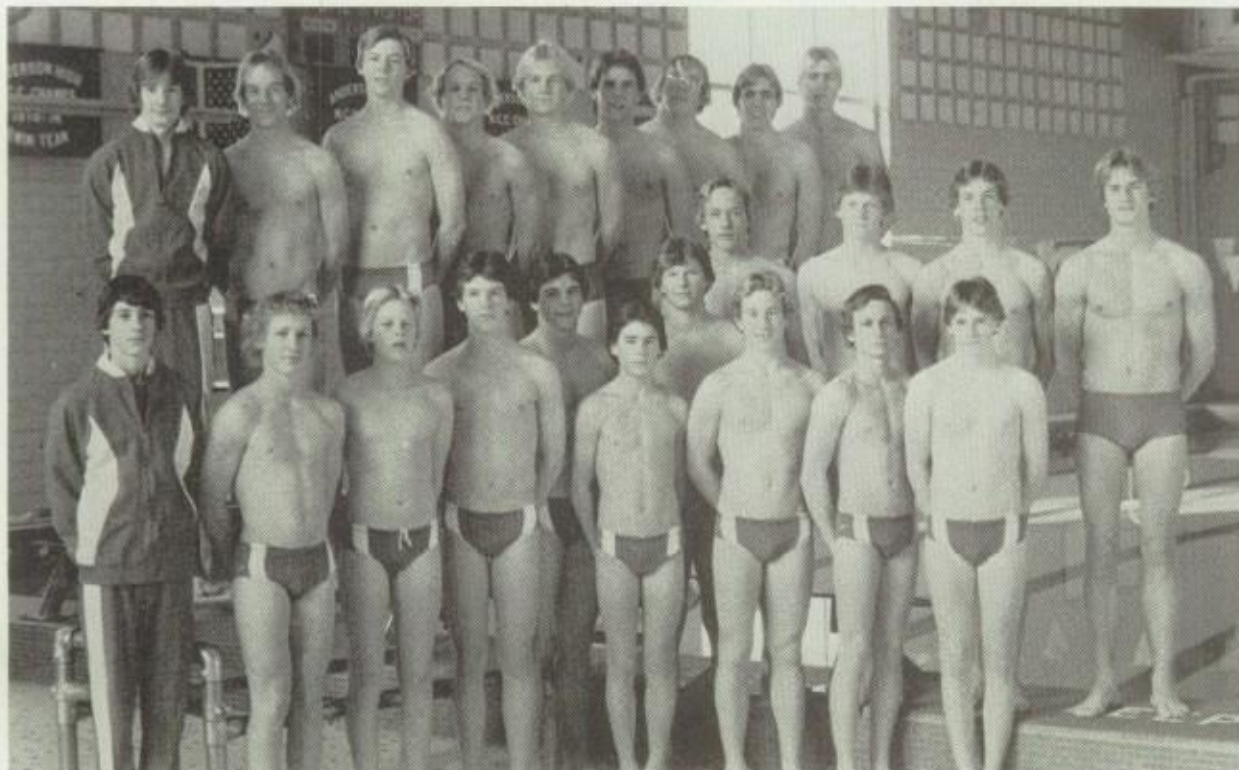

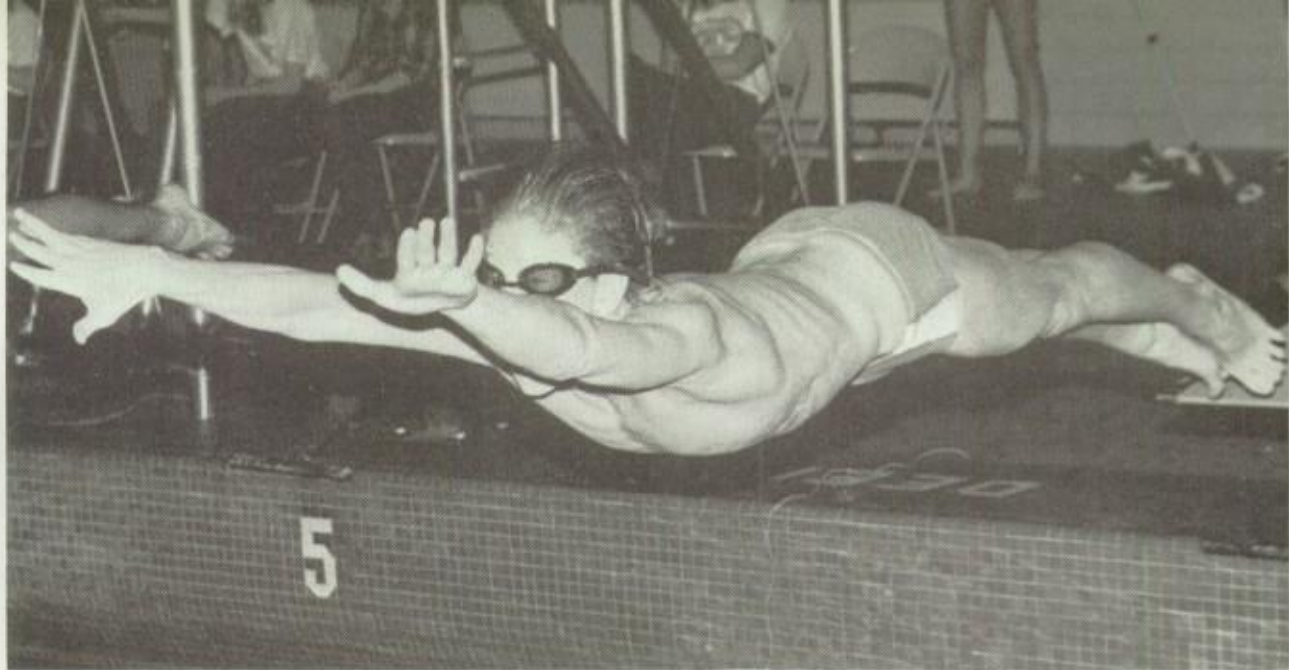

Winning was one of the areas the freshmen delved into quite frequently throughout the season. They rolled up wins of 60 and 40 points over perennial football powers Marion and New Castle respectively. The final defeat of Highland ensured them of the title of city champions.

Coach Porter stressed, "Ninth grade is so different from the varsity level. I think with maturity and development these freshmen will do well."

Swim Teams Take Sectionals; Boys

5th In State

The best kept secret in Anderson High School had to be the continual success of the swim teams. The boys had placed in the top ten in the state for the last five years.

The Tribe was blessed with having the added advantage of a large senior class.

"There weren't too many times that I didn't feel they couldn't win no matter where I put them," said swim team coach Jim Alexander.

Coach Alexander was shown that his confidence was not without substance as the tankers took first place in every event in the sectional. They fell just short of taking first place in every event in the North Central Conference meet by :0.08 in.

"That is the first time that it has ever happened in an Anderson Sectional," said Coach Alexander about the sectional feat. "It was something to be proud of."

The swimmers ended the season with only two losses in dual meet competition. After winning the sectional, they proceeded to come away from the state meet with a fifth place finish.

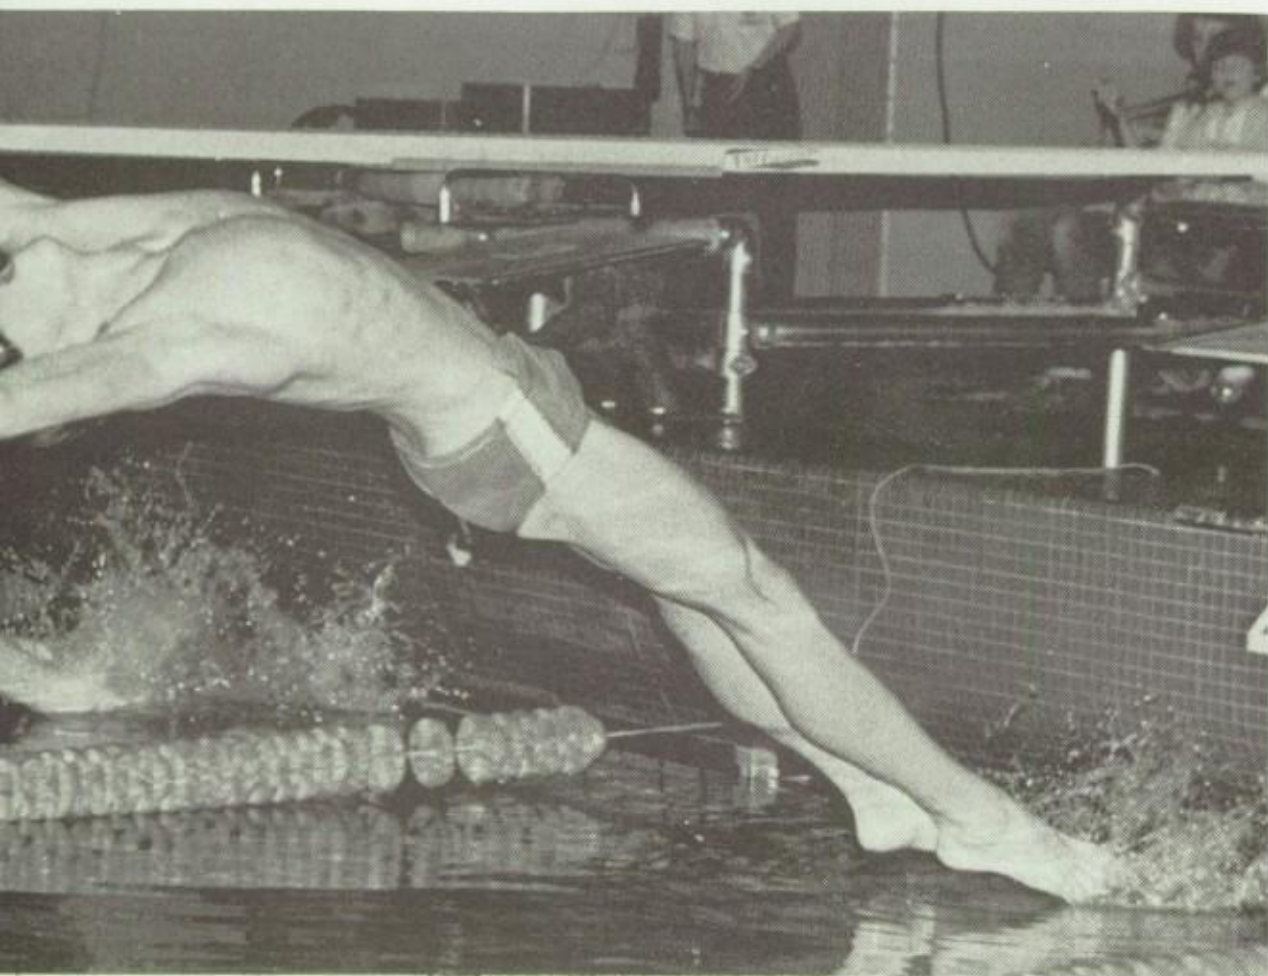

The girls swim team was no stranger to success, either.

"My total impression of the season...fantastic, just fantastic," praised girls' swim coach Ron Watson. "Each time out, the girls would improve their performances. It was a good season."

Mr. Watson couldn't have put it better. After grabbing a much coveted second place in the Columbus East Relays, the female tankers went on to win the sectional, defeating Carmel, the eventual third place finisher in the state meet. They finished the season with an eleventh place finish in the state.

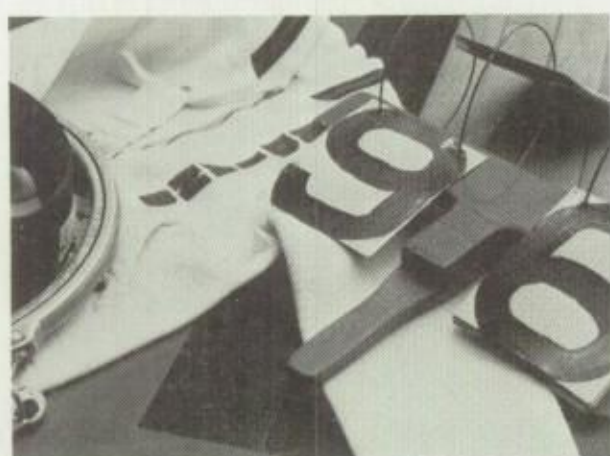

The main driving force behind the season's output was not focused on one individual. It was more or less a group effort.

"The girls worked hard all year, practicing before school and after school. Their success reflected their efforts. Each one of the girls improved her performance. It was a case of attaining lifetime bests," gleamed coach Watson.

Boy Tumblers Send Four to State Meet

The boys' and girls' gymnastics teams both went through very interesting and different seasons. Although the boys did very well and showed promise for the future, the girls ran into a very tough schedule. The schedule wasn't the only problem that they had this year as the start of the season saw them unable to find a coach.

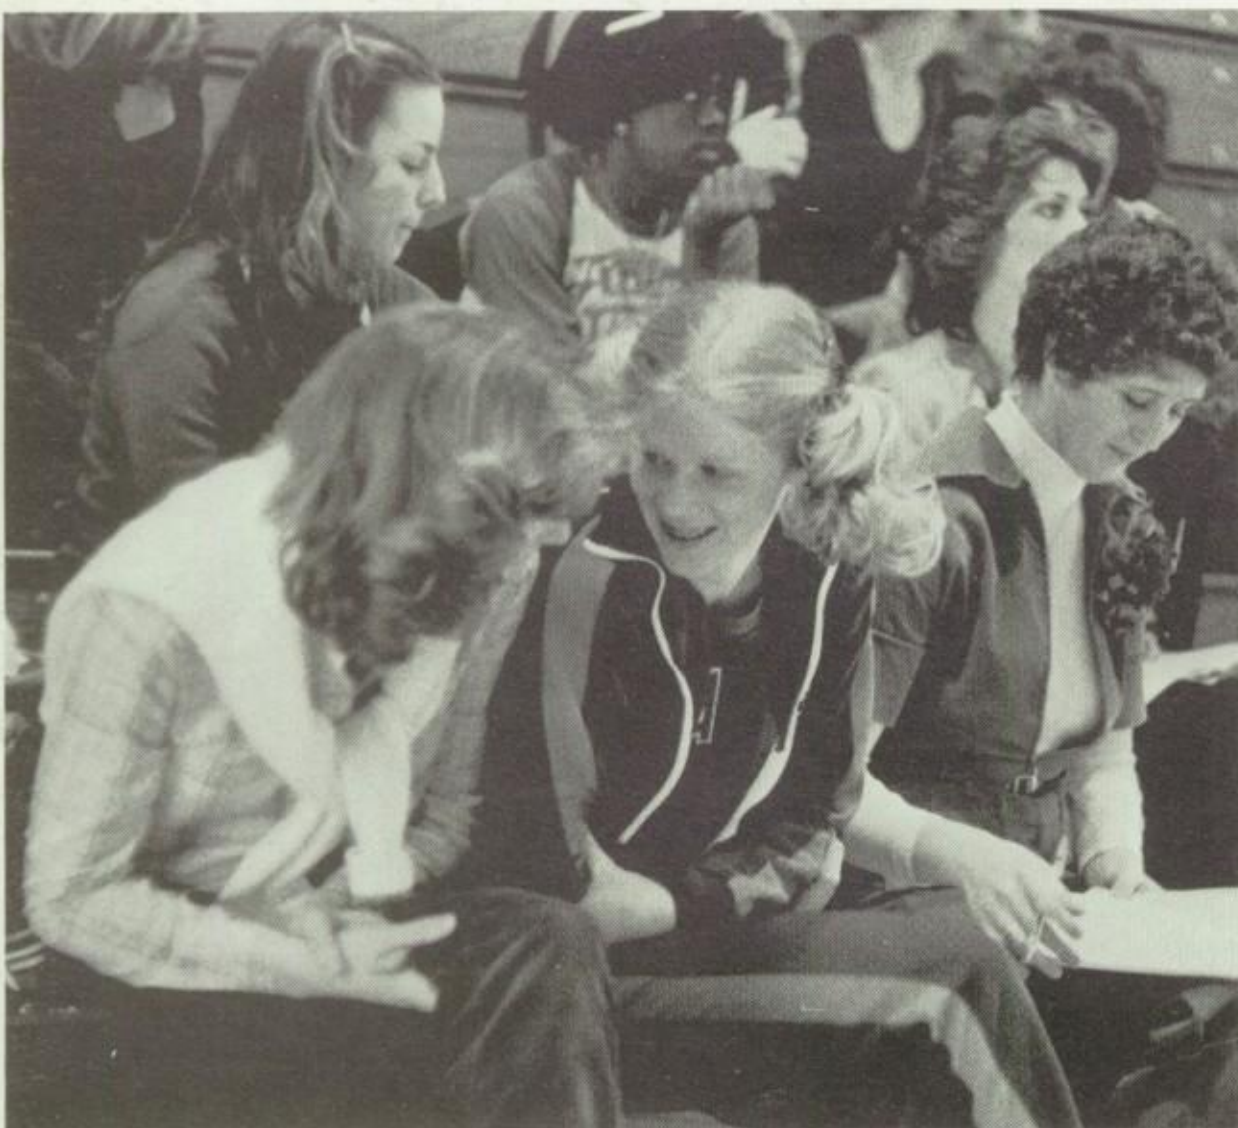

No faculty members could be found that wanted to take on the responsibility of the task of coach. It was not even decided if the girls' gymnastics program was going to be continued unless a coach could be found.

Finally, the spot was filled by two people from Ball State University in Muncie. They were Kim Thornburg and Terri Chaplin. Even though the girls suffered through a long and grueling season, there were some bright spots.

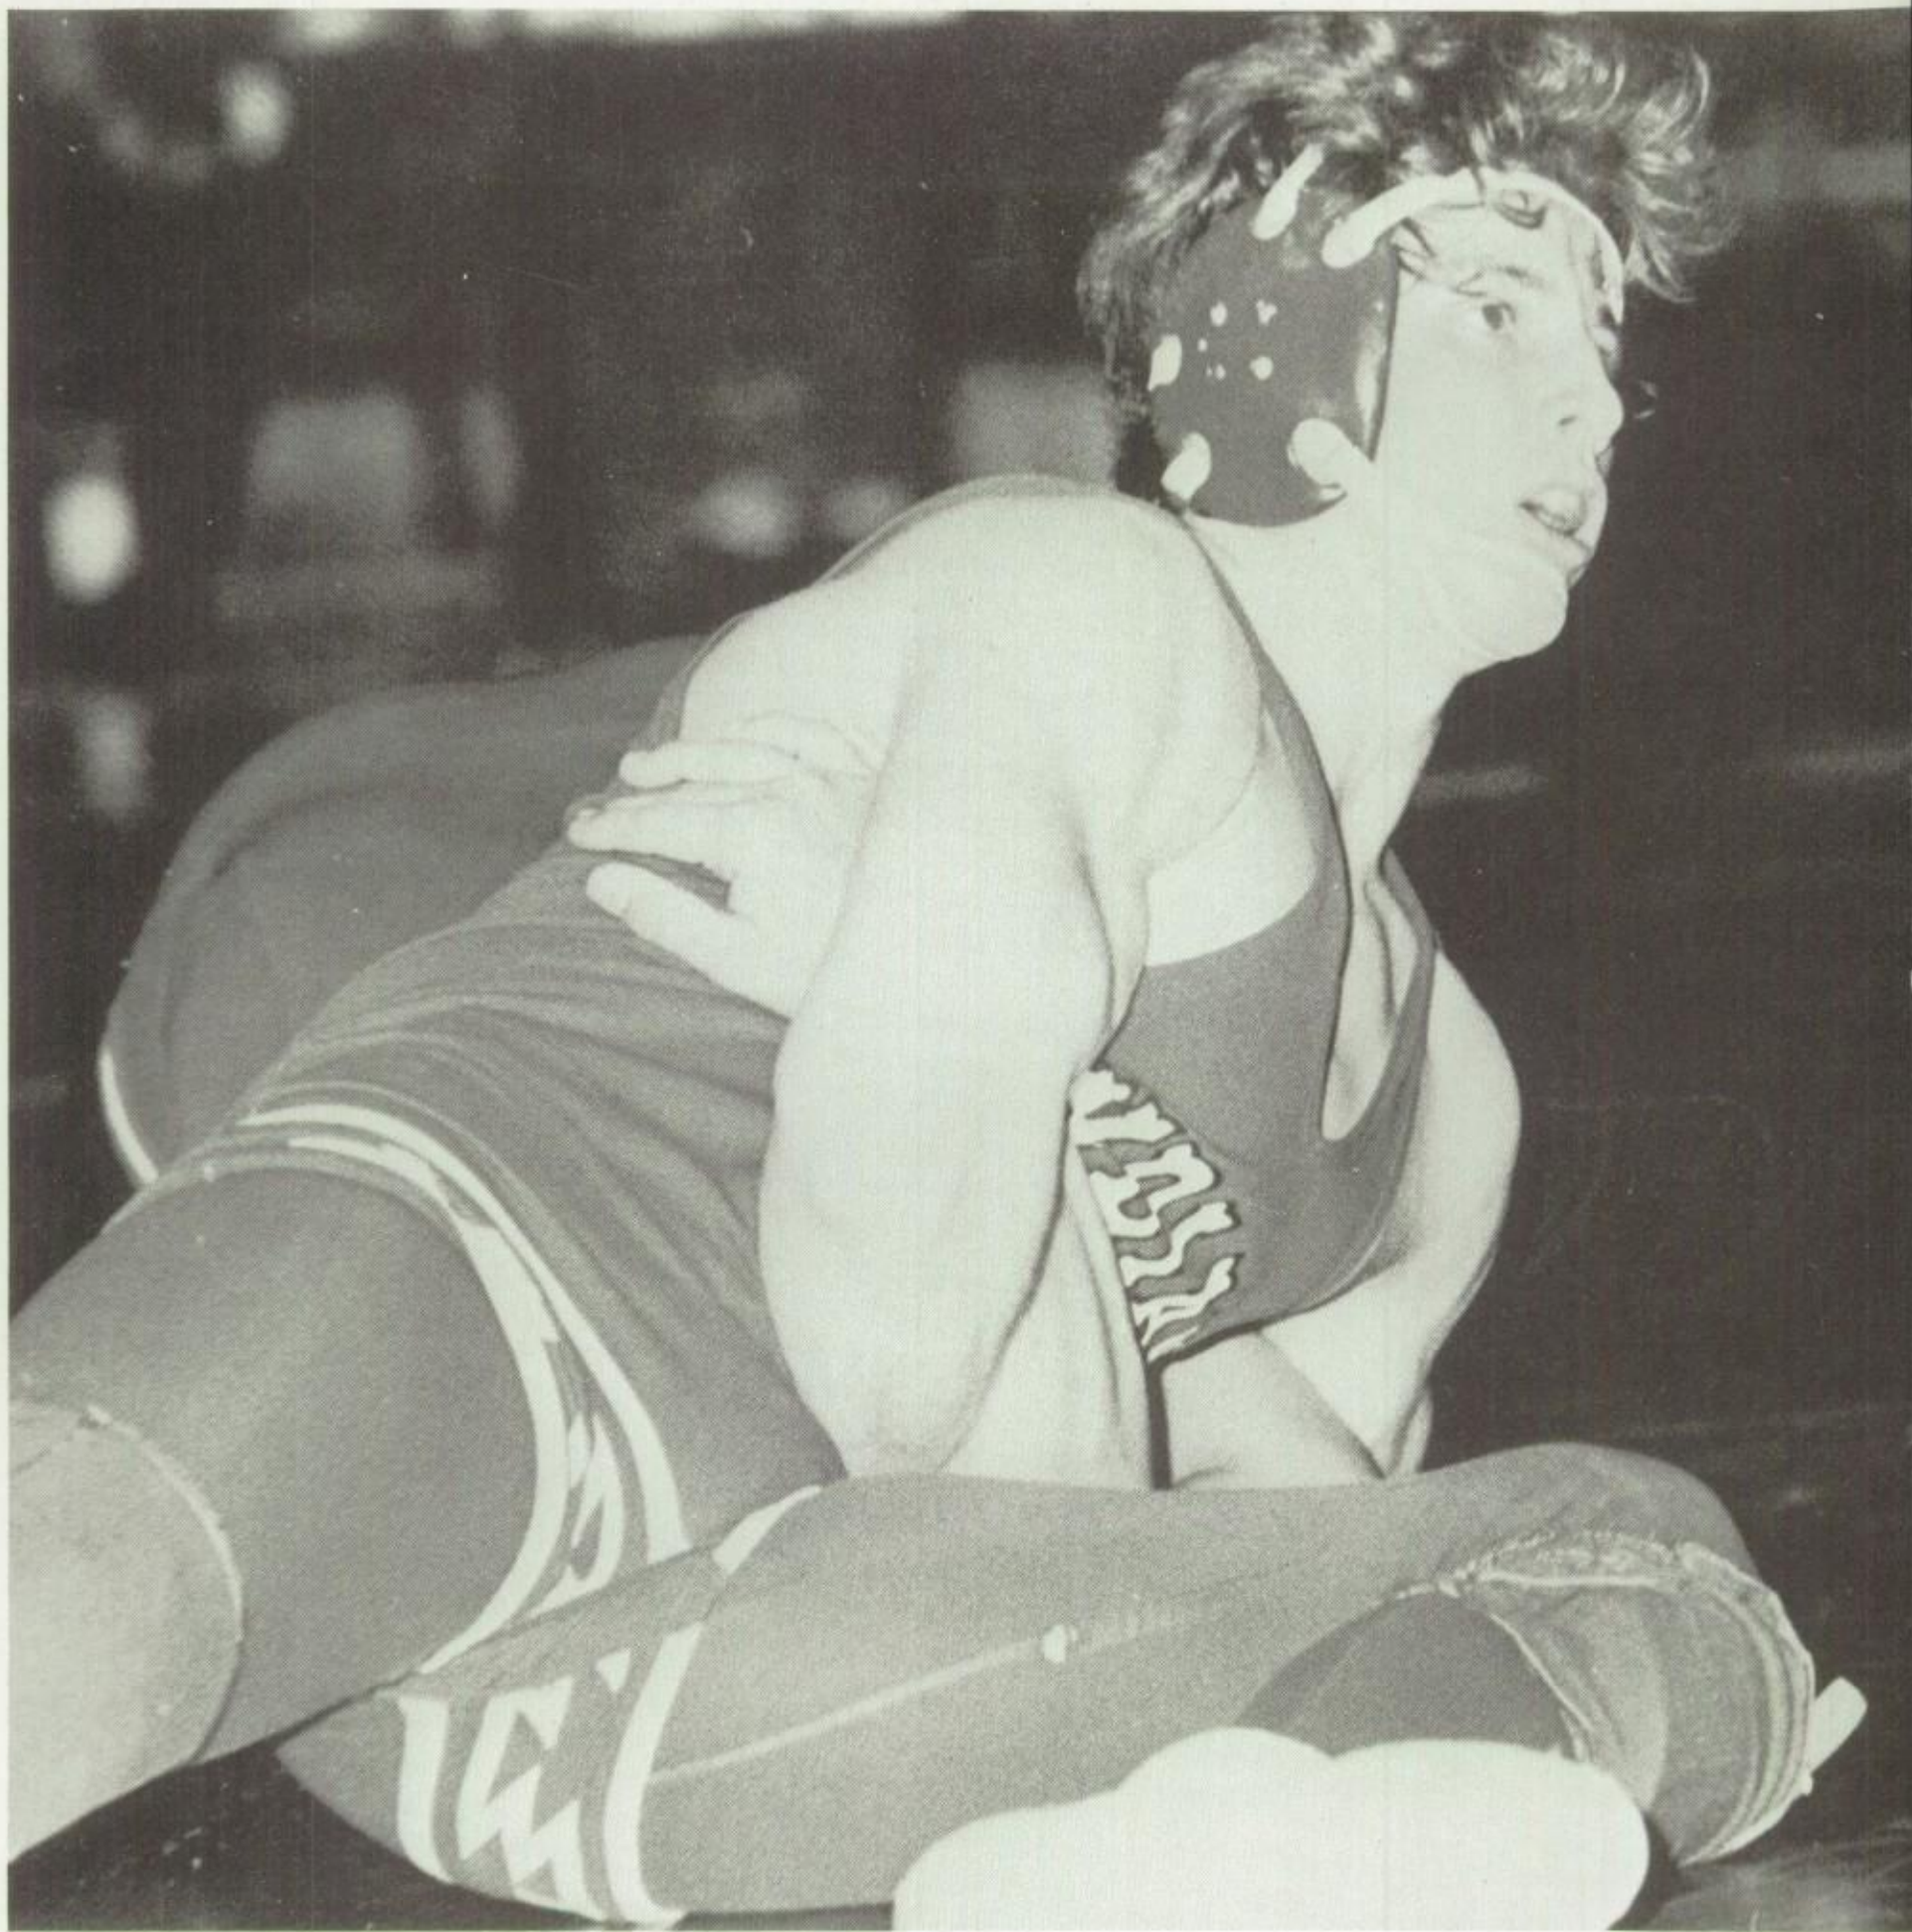

The team consisted of mostly younger underclassmen, which promised a stronger team in the future.

The team was lead by junior Mike Bish. Bish showed he had what it takes to perform well as he took a second place in the floor exercise during the state meet in Wabash. He also placed seventh in the all-around competition.

Anderson also sent three other gymnasts to the state meet. They were Mark Degitz, Andy orbik, and John Montgomery. Although they didn't place high in the standings, they gave Indian gymnastic fans something to look forward to next year. Anderson has proved that they will be one of the premier teams coming out of our area next season.

Wrestling Rises; Skinner Takes

Second in State

"The high point of the season had to be our winning the Madison County Tournament," commented AHS wrestling coach Al Ihnat. "We had two goals early: to win the county tourney and to be the city champs; and we accomplished both of them."

Anderson acquired the city championship crown by defeating both Highland and Madison Heights. Although they fashioned a not-so-illustrious 6-7 record, the tribe grapplers didn't have that bad of a season. The county tourney saw them beat Pendleton Heights, the wrestling team that has dominated this area for a long time.

Injury also played a big part in the season, but the Indians showed that their courage was as big as their muscles. Jeff Read participated in and won the sectional ten days after surgery on his toe. Marty Morrow broke his collar bone early in the season. The doctors said he wouldn't make it back in time for sectional.

"Marty Morrow was a pleasant surprise," praised Coach Ihnat. "They said there was no way he would make it back, but as soon as he got his brace off, he got on the weights and worked hard. If everyone else had his desire and intensity, we would have won a few more matches."

The major highlight of the season was senior Tony Skinner's runner-up status in the state meet. Skinner ended the year at 28-2. His only losses came in the regional finale and the state finale where he was outpointed.

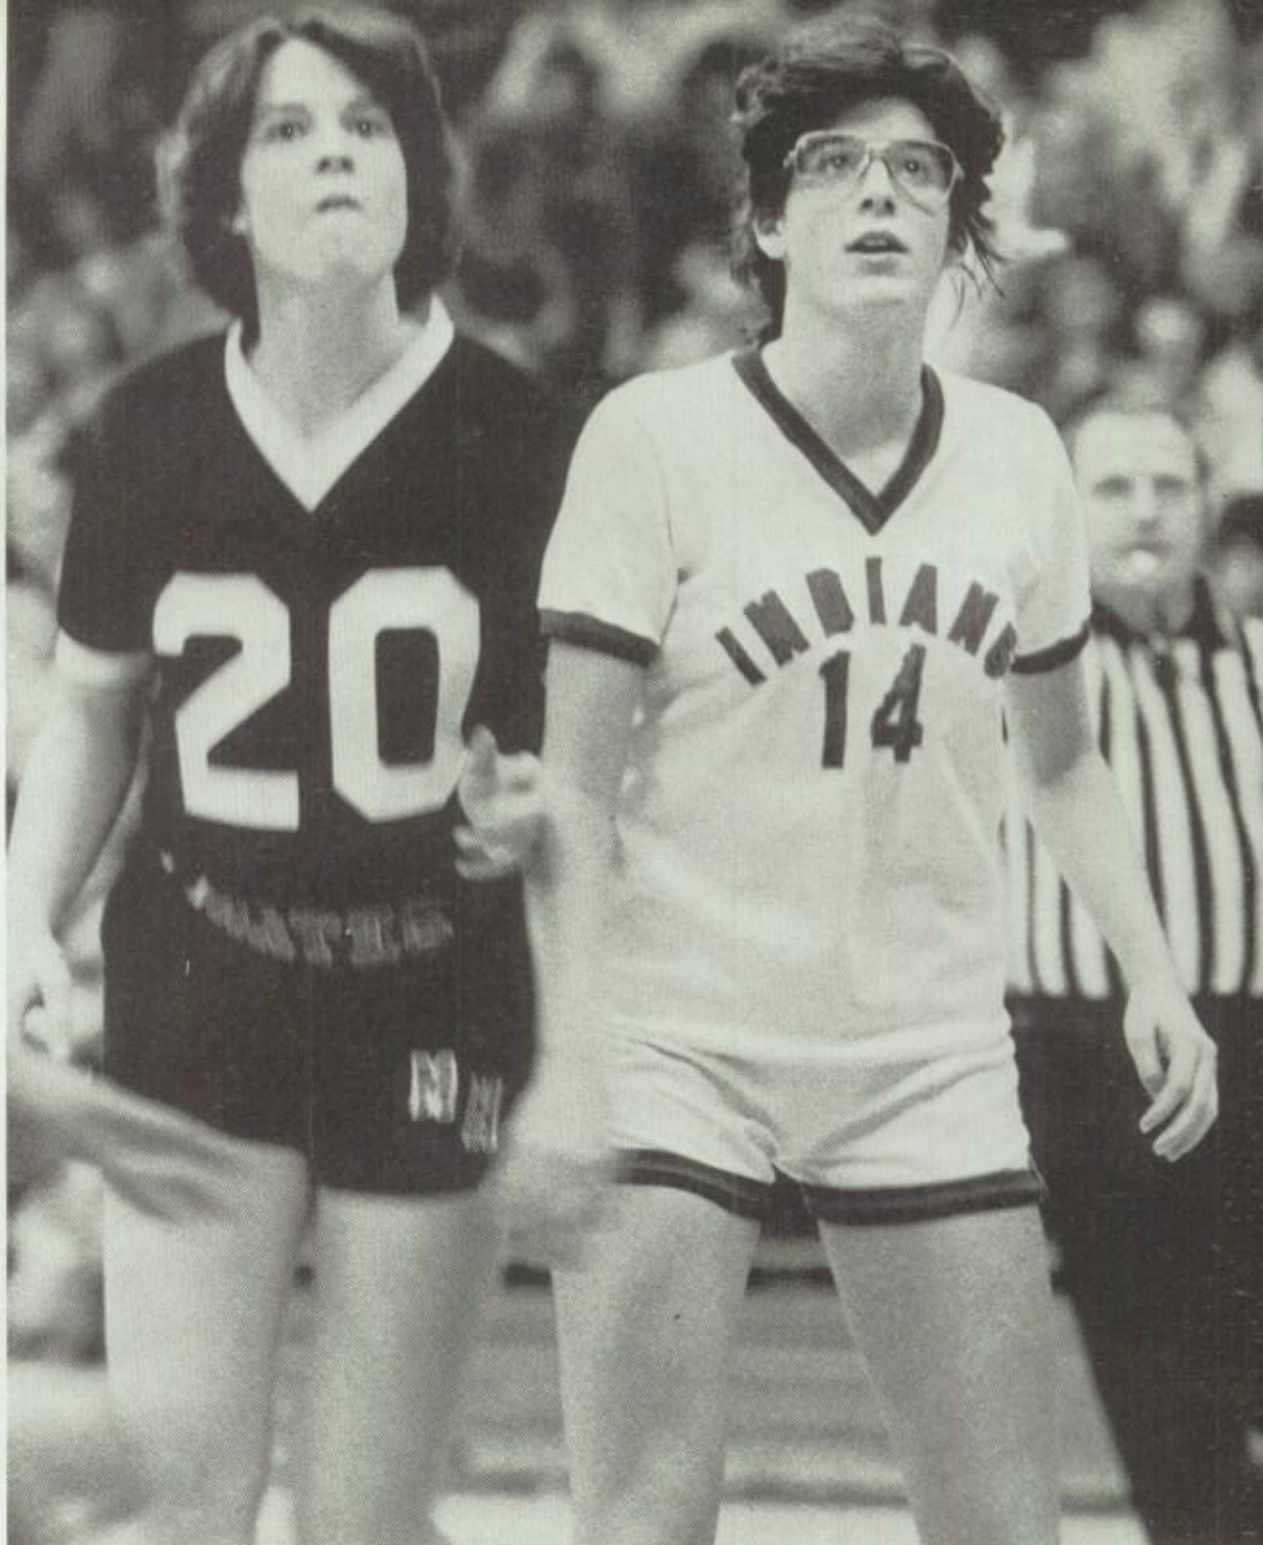

"Not many people know this, but Tony wrestled on extremely bad knees all year. He had trouble scoring points. He relied on pins. That just made his accomplishment that much better," said Coach Ihnat. Another senior who posted a good year was Greg Hulse. Greg finished third in semi-state with a season record of 25-2.

"I've had these guys since they were freshmen," added Coach Ihnat. "They had a good season. You can't ask for much more."

Girl Hoopsters Display Talent, Winning Knack

"It's tough to beat two teams like Madison Heights and Highland in the same week," stated Anderson's Girls' Basketball Coach Bob Kearns after contemplating his team's misfortunes in the sectional tournament. Although they were able to defeat a highly rated Madison Heights team in the first game, they were beaten in the final game by a tough Highland squad.

"I felt a team would have to be awfully good to beat us, and they were. Highland is one of the better teams in the state. In fact, all three city schools are as good as most in the state," said Mr. Kearns.

Highland became only the second team to beat the tribeswomen throughout the season, doing it twice. Marion pulled off two victories also, making Anderson's final record 16-4.

"We had an excellent ball team," said Mr. Kearns. "In fact, it might have been the best ball team I've ever had here. It's just that the schools around the county are getting a lot stronger."

The tribe was led by senior standout Melody Teague. She led the team in scoring for the second straight year, led the county in scoring, and was an All-County Team selection. She also was an Honorable Mention All-State Team selection.

"Melody had to be one of the better players in the area," said Mr. Kearns.

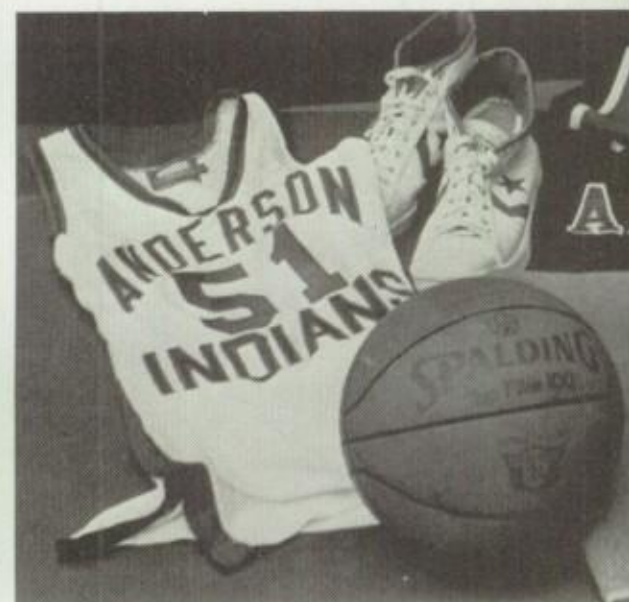

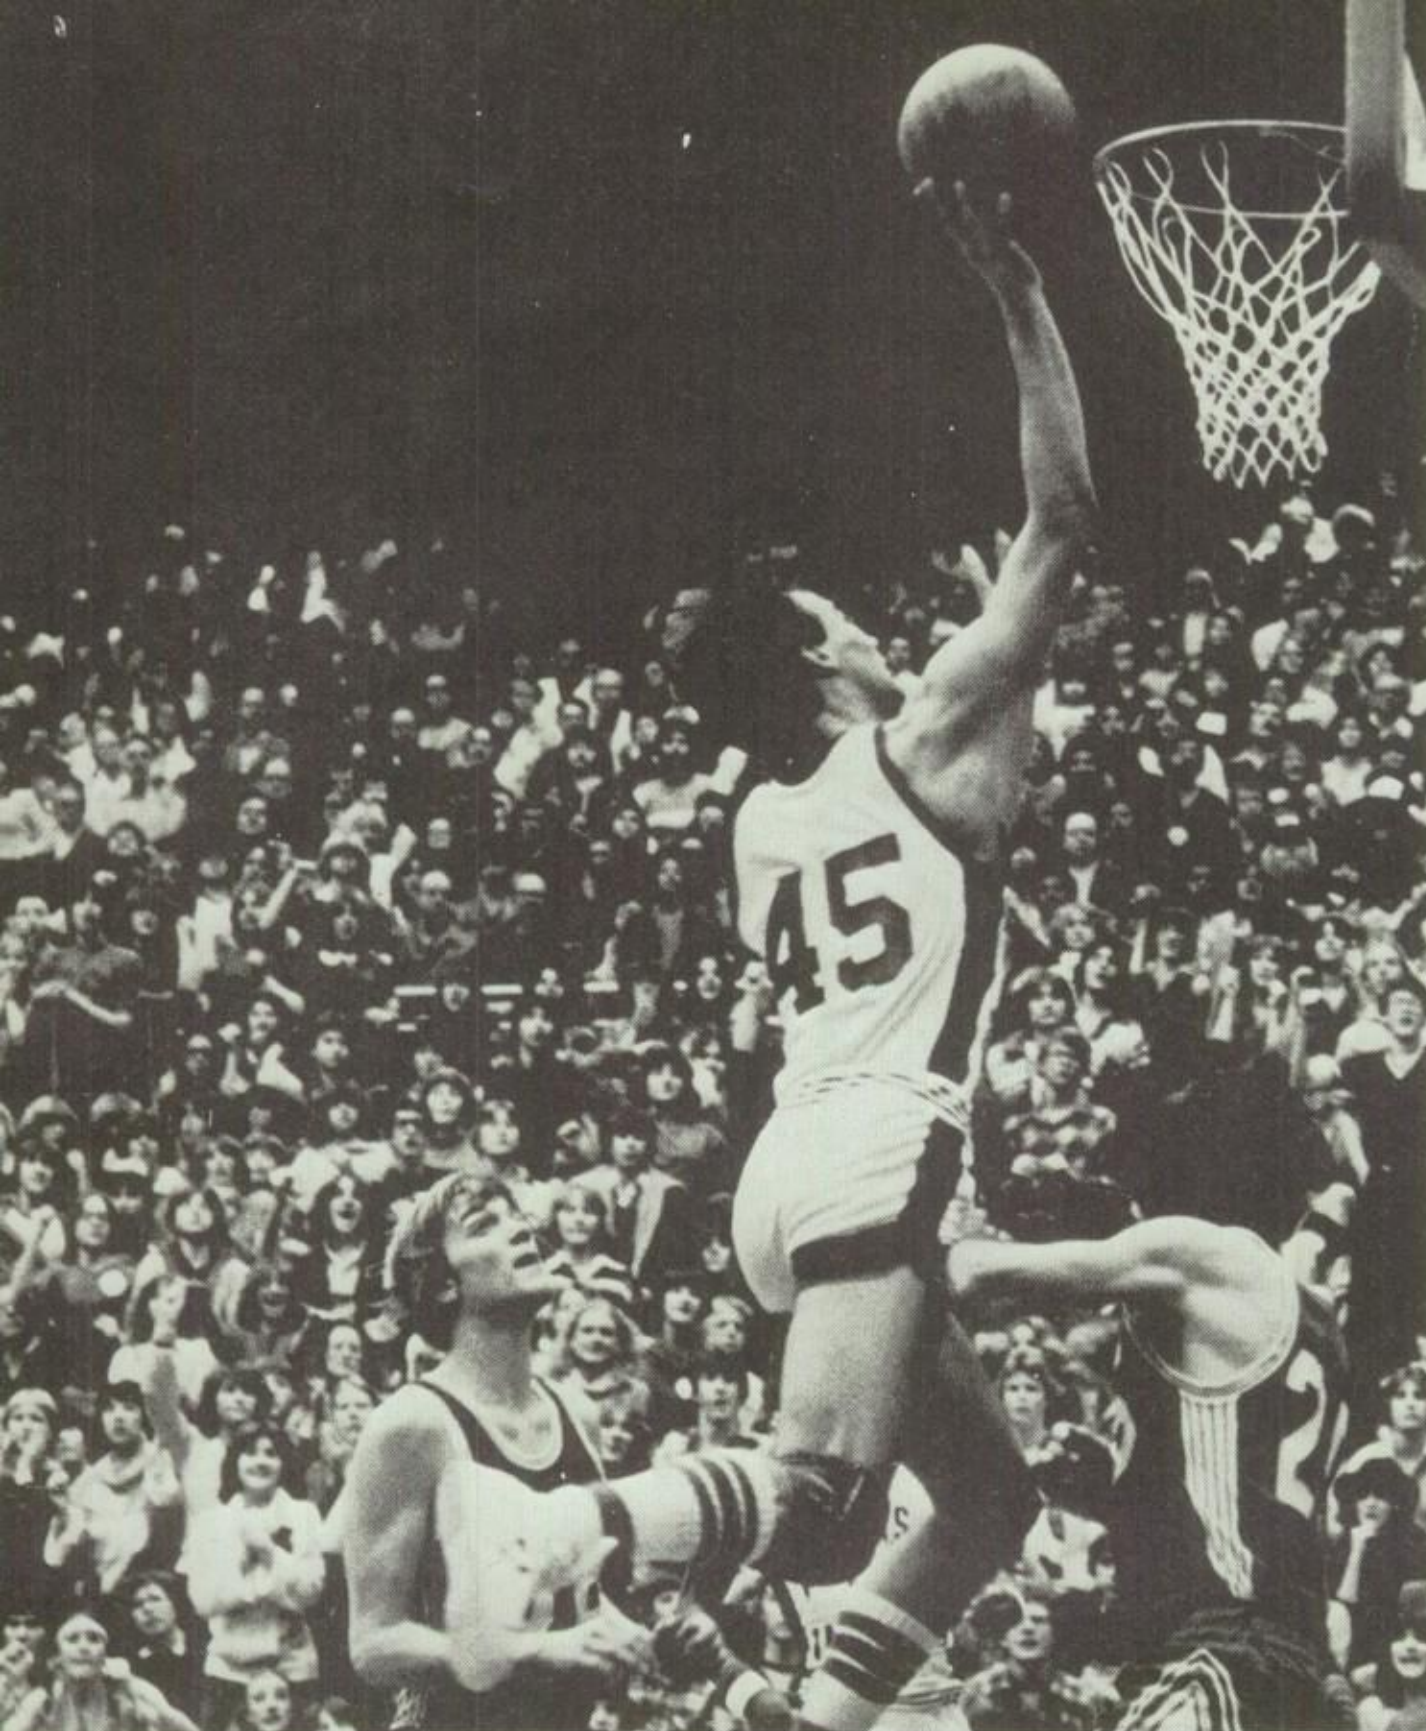

Another player who loomed in the limelight was senior Angie Rector. Angie was a four year member of the varsity squad and played in 74 varsity games throughout her career.

These two - along with seniors Trina Walker, Stephanie Vaughn, and Mary Frischkorn - led the team to their impressive showing of the year.

Forge Strong

17-3 Season

"On the basis of one loss, I'm very satisfied. The Kokomo loss really hurt. Besides that, we had a rather good season," chirped Anderson's always vocal coach, Norm Held.

A "rather good season" is one way to put it, as Anderson started the season as the number two ranked team in the state. After two weeks, they had elevated to the top position in the state.

But nothing lasts forever. This was showcased as the Wizards of the Wigwam dropped a 59-58 contest to Highland.

"The Highland loss felt like someone was taking my appendix out without using an anesthetic" commented Coach Held.

It couldn't have been put any better, as the loss knocked the Indians from the pinnacle of Indiana basketball.

"The funny thing is that at the start of the season, I thought we were the third best team in the city. The main reason is because of experience. We only had one-and-a-half starters back from last year's state runner-up team," stated Coach Held.

This experience showed later on in the year as ankle injuries sidelined a few players. The Kokomo game, which the Indians lost, expressed this idea, as the Tribe played almost three entire quarters without the aid of senior quicksilver guard Shawn Teague. Near the end of the season, a loss at Richmond denied the Indians of a North Central Conference Crown.

Henry Johnson ("Big H") led the team in scoring with 23.6 points per game. He ended the season leading the county in scoring.

Johnson and Shawn Teague were chosen for the Indiana All-State Basketball team. This was the first time since 1974 when Ray Taylor and Tony Marshall made the squad. This was also only the third time two AHS Hoosiers made the team in one year.

JV, Frosh Post Good Seasons; Future Bright

Anderson High School basketball is assured of a continuance of its excellence in the sport of roundball due to recent exploits of both the freshmen and reserve teams. The freshmen ended the season with an overall record of 20-5 and the reserves posted an 18-2 mark.

First year coaches Denny Montgomery and Steve Porter had nothing but praise for their young freshmen team.

"I honestly thought we were in trouble at the start of the year, but the kids were a lot more fundamentally sound than we thought they were," said Coach Montgomery.

"We stressed four things at the start of the season," said Coach Porter. "They were fundamentals, the team concept, a winning attitude and to have fun when you play. Without these four things, we felt you couldn't play that well, no matter what."

The play of the freshmen team reflected this attitude throughout the year. Although they were not that much bigger than the teams they faced, they physically manhandled most of the teams they played. As Coach Porter put it, "It's not how tall you are, it's how big you play."

When talking about depth, the conversation shouldn't stop without mentioning this year's reserve team. The best thing about this year's team, according to Coach Jerome Foley, was that a large amount of people improved to a great extent.

The main reason for this great improvement is the long and hard practices that the team had throughout the season.

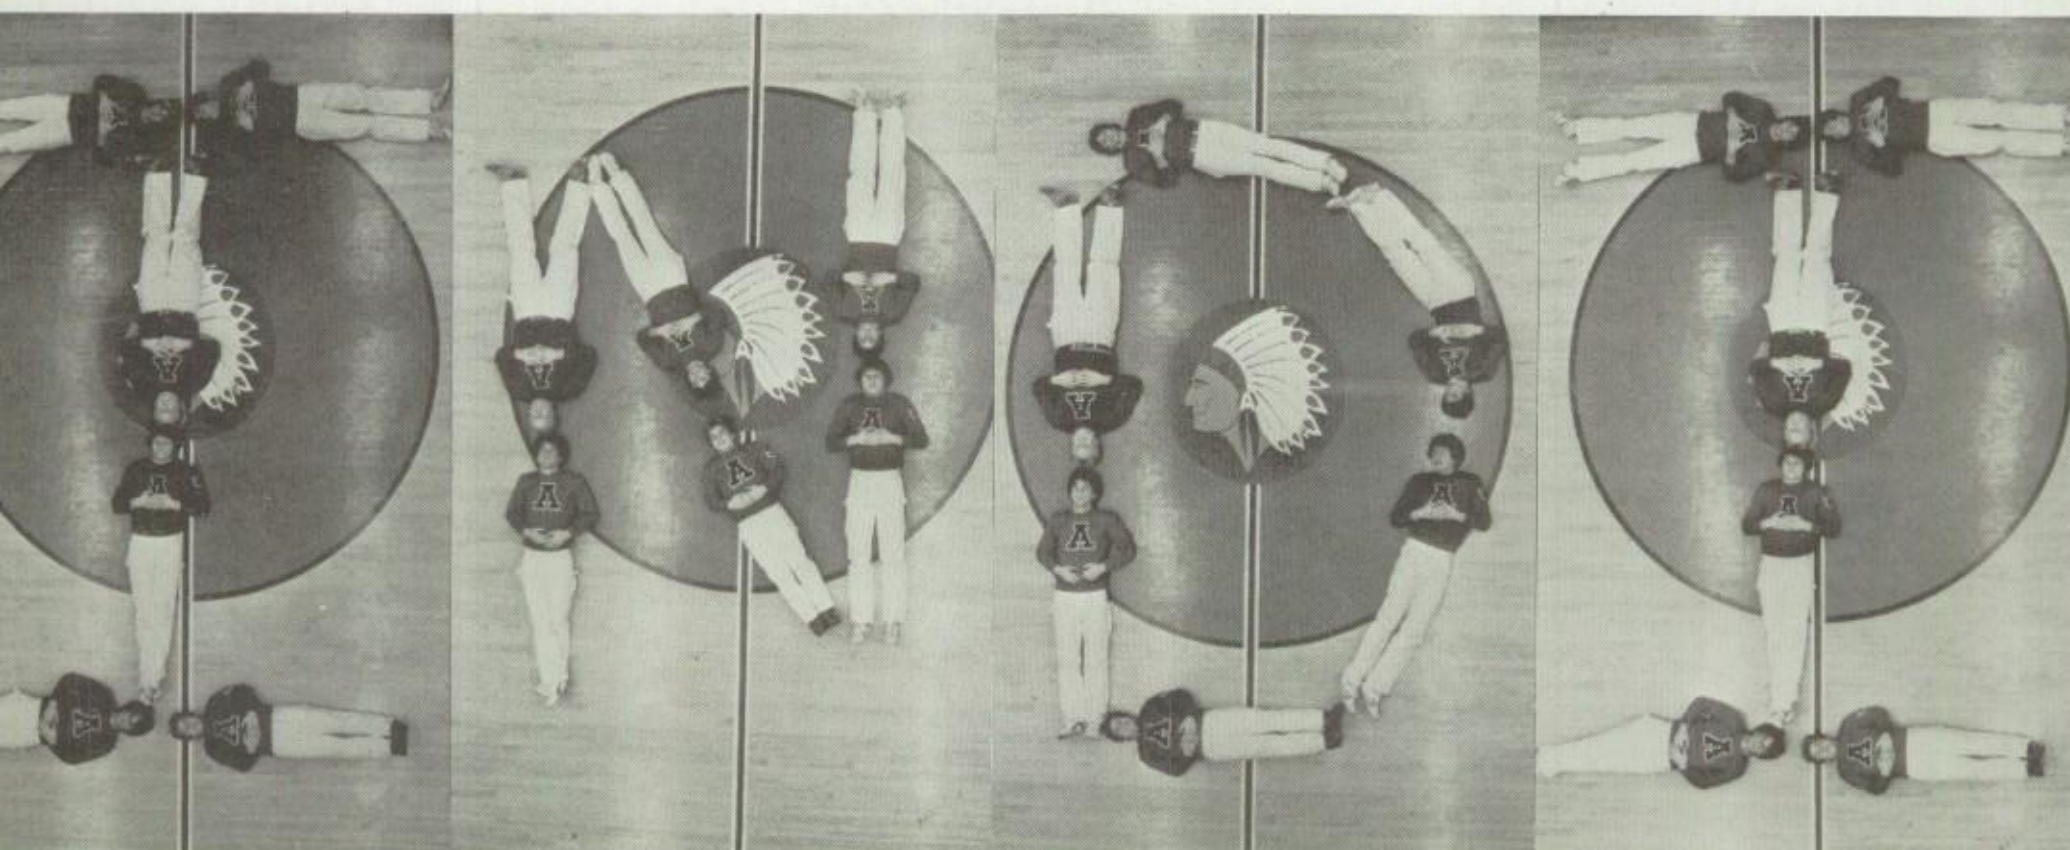

"We work harder than most other teams in the state," stated Foley. "We really work hard in practice."

The reserves were also noted for their depth. Some players, like David Moore and Danny Zachary, split their playing time between reserve and varsity. The Indians boasted a front line consisting of six people over six feet tall. The amazing thing about the team was that every person lead the team in scoring in at least one game.

Mascot/Maiden, A-club Lead Fans In Indian Spirit

"The only thing you used to need to get into A-club was your letter, but that's not the case anymore," stated Mrs. Rosalie Bernard, A-club sponsor.

One of the major areas tackled by A-club was the revising of the constitution. This revising called for each member to pay an annual dues of one dollar. This assured him/her of season basketball tickets in the A-club section and admittance into the A-club picture.

The moving forces behind this change were president Brian Miller, vice-president Dan Woschitz, and secretary Lisa Hazel. These officers are elected yearly by all members of A-club.

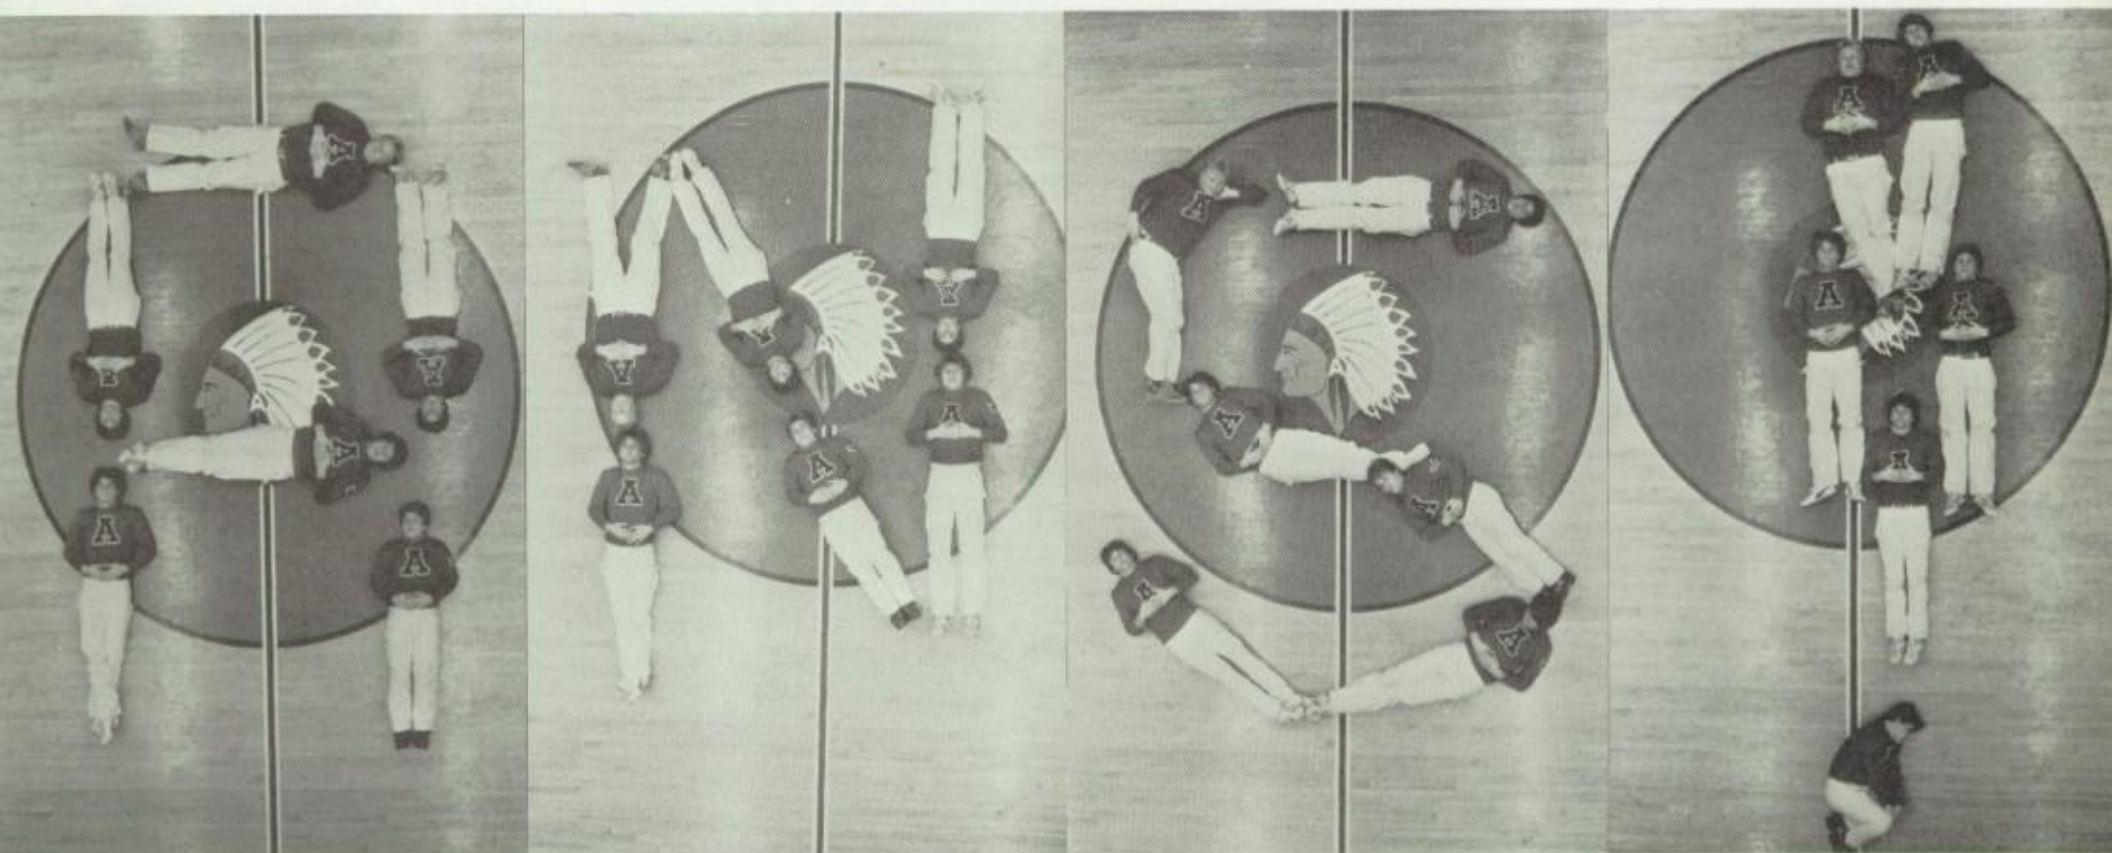

A-club also performed the annual chores of ringing bells for the salvation army during the Yuletide season, and holding ropes during the basketball games, pep sessions, and convocations.

Not a group to be held back, they also led the charge to back the Indians' team. Spirit was also raised by mascot Andy Orbik and maiden Karen Lippman, who performed before each home game.

Sports Succeed Outside School

When the 2:30 school bell rang, the school day was not over for everybody. Some students trudged to the gymnasium or the football field for practice. Yes, sports were a major part of school life. Sometimes, sports were stressed more than school work. But not all sporting activities were school related.

There were many sports that were considered hobbies by most people that others found very competitive. During the summer, many students would find their way to the various lakes around the state of Indiana to get in some serious water skiing. Water skiing was a rapidly growing sport because it was not that hard to learn. All that was needed was a boat, skis, and a lake.

Another popular sport was skating. With ice skating in the winter or roller skating year round, it was one of the most popular forms of exercise, especially with the new roller disco craze.

Many high school students participated in the church basketball program during the winter. There were also YM-CA related programs that provided playing time for people.

For people who were interested in other team sports, summer baseball programs were available for students. Babe Ruth baseball league was made up of high school students and offered some strong competition for the team members.

If team sports were not on an AHSer's agenda, many exercise programs or classes were available. Health clubs, such as the Health Spa, were located throughout the city. Membership entitled the teenager to a variety of facilities - exercise machines, racquet ball courts and gymnasium.

An Extra Effort

ACTIVITIES

Five...four...three...two..."Band are you ready?" shouted drum major Lance Avery from the Indiana State Fair track.

"Yes sir," answered the band.

The gun shot fired, starting the five minute band show that 200 band members spent the entire summer perfecting. Clad in white overlays, the dedicated instrumentalists along with the Indianettes and Colourguard members put everything they had into their routine. A wet track did not stop the marching Indians from performing a company front for which they received a thunder of applause. When results were announced, the Indians received fourth place. Tearful eyes were just one sign of how many band members felt. "Although fourth place is good," commented rifle twirler Sharon Johnson, "it just did not live up to my expectations."

While band members marched their summer away, Choral Club members practiced singing. As early as June, choral members started preparing for their presentation of "The Sound of Music". This performance on October 25 and 26 only started the many activities of Choral Club. The main event these students planned for was their trip to Hawaii over spring break.

Although the school year seemed to start out slow with the completion of the new addition, AHS students did not find it hard to keep up a rowdie image. One place every student was given a chance to display Indian spirit was at pep sessions. Convos for sports awards, holidays and special guests also entertained the spirited Indians.

Student Council kept up the Indian spirit by planning many activities appealing to all students. The Homecoming Dance, Fall Wind-up and Twirp were three such events. Attending dances, participating in sports and keeping up school spirit were just three ways AHS students had a rowdie time BUILDING ON A NEW IMAGE.

RENDITIONS

Convos Stage

Pep, Talent

"You just sorta, crushed my aorta!" sang Pat Boyle with the help of the Ball State Singers at the Fall convo. This was just one special event that made the student body leave their third hour class and go to the gym.

John Gunter, "the singing Sheriff", made a guest appearance at the Thanksgiving convo, along with the Singers Unlimited and the Madrigals.

Traditionally, the Choral Club did their rendition of "T'was the Night Before Christmas," among various other songs. Santa Claus also made a special appearance at the Christmas convo.

As tourney time came closer, it was easy to see the growing rowdiness of the student body at pep sessions. During Red and Green week, lockers were decorated as well as doors. But, as usual, both pep sessions and convos were ended with, "You may now return to your third hour class."

GREEN...

Hulk Revives Incredibility

"For the green, for the green, for the green, fight, fight!" "GRRRR!!" Is it a cheerleader? Is it a fan? Is it the band? It's none of those - it's the AHS Hulk.

Green magic from the incredible Hulk began two years ago, with the energetic ambition of senior Brian Miller. Brian's colorful "costume" consisted of food coloring and noxzema. His growl and stance brought pandemonium to the AHS basketball games.

The cheerleaders also helped to add tremendous spirit at all of the games and pep sessions. Each day during seventh hour the cheerleaders would practice mounts and cheers.

Varsity cheerleaders also made scrapbooks for the football and basketball players, for the second year. A-Club helped the cheerleaders with their mounts at the games.

Social Events

"My honey has a first name," began one of the more popular Valentine Singing Grams that student council members sang to AHS students near Valentine's Day.

Along with penny postman, carnation sales, spirit chain sales, skating parties, the student faculty basketball game and a few soc-hops after basketball and football games, Valentine grams was one way to raise money for the various dances and activities that student council held for the student body.

Council's first major project was the Fall Wind-Up, which was the first dance to be held in the new commons area. The theme was "Gone Hollywood" and music was provided by Ice Age.

The spring dance, Twirp, was next on the agenda where the girls asked the guys. The band, Mainstreet, played at the dance with the theme "The Wonderful World of Disney."

Another project that faced student council was to redecorate their new room which was the old resource center. This was another way to show that they were "building on a new image."

REUNION...

Karen Jackson

Chosen Queen

The excitement grew as the events of the evening of September 21 came closer. A.H.S. students put the finishing touches on their entries for the Homecoming Parade, which traditionally moved through downtown Anderson to Denny Field. The A.H.S. band led the parade part of the way, and then the four Corvettes carrying the queen candidates followed.

Even though the fans were extremely "rowdie", a silence broke as it was announced that A.H.S. senior Karen Jackson was the 1979 Homecoming Queen. Jackson was then crowned by Dana Johnson, the 1978 queen. Junior Marybeth Graybiel, sophomore Elizabeth Kistner and freshman Monica McHafey attended Jackson's court.

The senior class also received first place in the float division with the junior and sophomore classes coming in second and third respectively. Senior class president, Chris Oleksy stated, "By the judging of Homecoming Queen and the float, it definitely proves that we're the class with class."

Although the Indians were defeated by the New Castle Trojans, this didn't stop the A.H.S. students and graduates from living it up at the Homecoming Dance after the game.

PARADISE . . .

Juniors Sponsor

Final Dance

Having a large new addition to Anderson High School created new standards which gave a feeling of pride. These high standards were evident in this year's Prom, along with tradition, which had always played a big part in the year's final dance.

The Junior Class Officers and Junior Executive Council took charge of the dance and the selection of the queen. Work on ideas for Prom began in February. This gave plenty of time to develop a variety of ideas.

Members of the Junior class who wanted to help work on Prom had to sign up to work the coat check at the basketball games.

The money earned from coatcheck, along with money from refreshment concessions, financed the dance.

Members of the Junior class voted for three consecutive weeks for their choice for Prom queen. First, they chose candidates from each homeroom. Then the field was narrowed to the final three candidates: Laura Gatton, Dana Johnson, and Linda Turner. From these three finalists was chosen the 1980 Prom Queen, Miss Linda Turner. She was crowned by Angie Hay, the 1979 Prom Queen.

The prom committee members decorated the event to simulate the theme, "An Evening in Paradise." The atmosphere was created to take people away from reality into a paradise on earth. Music was provided by Malachi, consisting of nine members from Indianapolis. The group played mostly the top forty which was a mixture of the best of funk and rock.

DISCIPLINE..

Band Places Fourth at Fair

"We know a man who has no hair, he's going to help us win State Fair," chanted the Anderson High School Marching Indians on the field as they were getting ready to perform at the Indiana State Fair on August 22nd, 1979.

The band practiced many grueling hours during summer vacation to prepare for this contest and many others. The man who led them to their fourth place finish was Mr. Donald P. Hoffman, the director of the AHS band.

One band member was asked if all the hours of practice were worth it or not and he commented, "Yes, it was I gained several friendships and had the self-satisfaction that comes with a good performance."

The Paul Lavalie Award for the most outstanding band musician in the state of Indiana was presented to AHS Senior Ellen Marmon at the fair.

PERFECTION...

Marching Only Begins Season

After all of the endless hours spent perfecting marching routines for the State Fair competition and entertaining football fans at home games, one would have thought that the band deserved a rest. Instead it plunged into providing music at the twelve home basketball games at the Wigwam.

When one band member was asked what she obtained from all that work she replied, "The relationships with the others mainly. We're like one big family, and besides there is some fun involved." Don Hoffman's music makers also performed at convos, pep sessions and other school functions.

Quietly working behind the scenes, the stage and lighting crew made it possible for the choral and drama groups to perform flawlessly. They operated the carbon-arc spotlights, stage lights, and the microphones and sound systems at the games and convos. During the band's marching season, they acted as a road crew.

AMBITION...

Choral Club Goes to Hawaii

Aloha! Eight days on Waikiki Beach in Honolulu. International competition with world class judging. Fun in the sun. Concerts. Sightseeing.

Over the past two years, members of the Anderson High School Choral Club sold oranges, grapefruit, candy bars, held an auction and raffled off a car so they could take this once in a life-time trip.

During September and October some members took turns working at the club car wash while other members painted a house. The Musical "The Sound of Music" was presented three times and dinner was served before two of the performances. Another dinner which was held was the Madrigal Dinner, a joyous festivity full of singing and food.

During the month of February the Singers Unlimited practiced up to six hours a day to get ready for the state wide Swing Choir Contest on February 22, at Bishop Leurs in Fort Wayne, Indiana.

SHOWTIME...

Choral Club

Presents Musical

"The hills are alive with the sound of music..." rang through the new auditorium as the Anderson High School Choral Department presented "The Sound of Music" on October 25, 27 and 28th.

Tryouts for the musical were held in the Spring of 1979. There were just a few leading roles and four of these roles were performed by children not yet in high school. There were many members of Choral Club who tried out for these leading roles but the few Mr. Seaver, the choral director, and Mrs. Jan Davison, the director, of the musical, selected were very talented.

Lori Dotson played the leading role of Maria Rainer, a young postulant who was going to be the new governess for the Captain VonTrapp family. Captain VonTrapp, a widower, portrayed by Greg Smith, was left with seven children to manage. Acting the parts of the children were, Julie Eflin, Steve Moore, Jill Bradford, Kerri Silverman, Joel Eddy, Annie Hoffman, and Laura Hitt.

The leads started rehearsing their lines and staging the play at Choral Club camp in August. In early September the cast started rehearsing six evenings a week to prepare for their six big performances.

SPOTLIGHT...

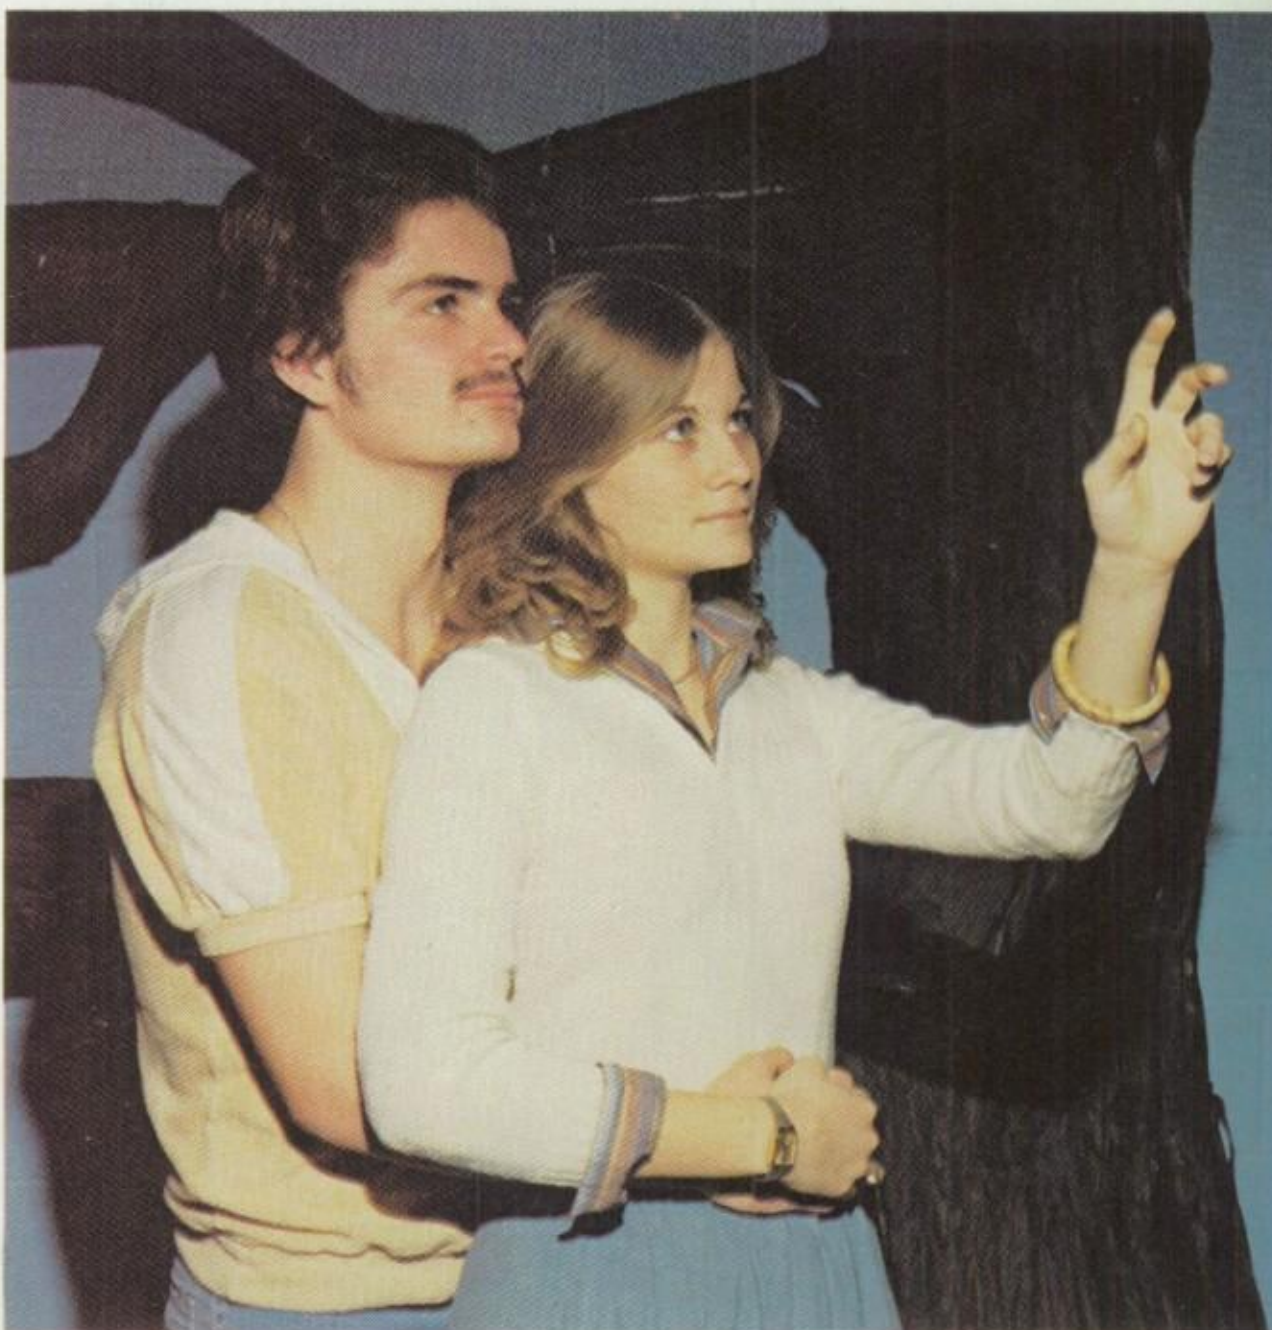

Thespians Perform In New Auditorium

The house lights began to dim. A hush fell among the audience. The green velvet draperies parted and the spectators emerged into another world - a world of mist, apparitions, mountain magic, and finally into a folk-tale - the love story of a valley girl and her witch-boy husband.

Dana Johnson and Kirk Smith had the leading roles in "Dark of the Moon" presented by the Thespian Troupe 736 of Anderson High School for their fall play.

Later in the year the Thespian Troupe presented the annual Play Festival in February. "As Sure as Your're Born", "Louder, I Can't Hear You", "I Bring you Flowers" and "The Reformation of Jimmy Valentine" were the four one-act plays for this performance.

As the casts were taking their final bows, the suspense built as to who would win the trophies for best actress, best actor, and best director.

A Custom Look...

ADS

Advertising was an expensive part of running a business in 1980. Advertising in the AHS INDIAN was not expensive, though, when considering the number of years a year book is used.

Some advertisers even enjoyed the chance to meet with prospective customers, such as the students in the picture, on an informal basis.

When a photographer shot a picture for an ad, as Bill Baxter and Angie May did at Paul Harris, it often attracted more customers to the business.

Businesses not only helped support the 1980 Indian, they also helped the students by providing jobs for them.

Students worked for various reasons. They needed the money to buy clothes, to save towards college, to put gas in their cars, and to just have fun.

The local businesses provided jobs for the student to earn money; the student, in turn, spent the money at the business; and the cycle continued. This cycle of cooperation helped in building on a new image for the students and the advertisers in the 1980 INDIAN.

Denise Gibson and Susan Staggenburg find the career center the place to go when they wanted to plan for their future. The career center opened up during the second semester to help students plan ahead for their future. The center was opened throughout the day and many students could go in whenever they felt like it.

Indians Come . . .

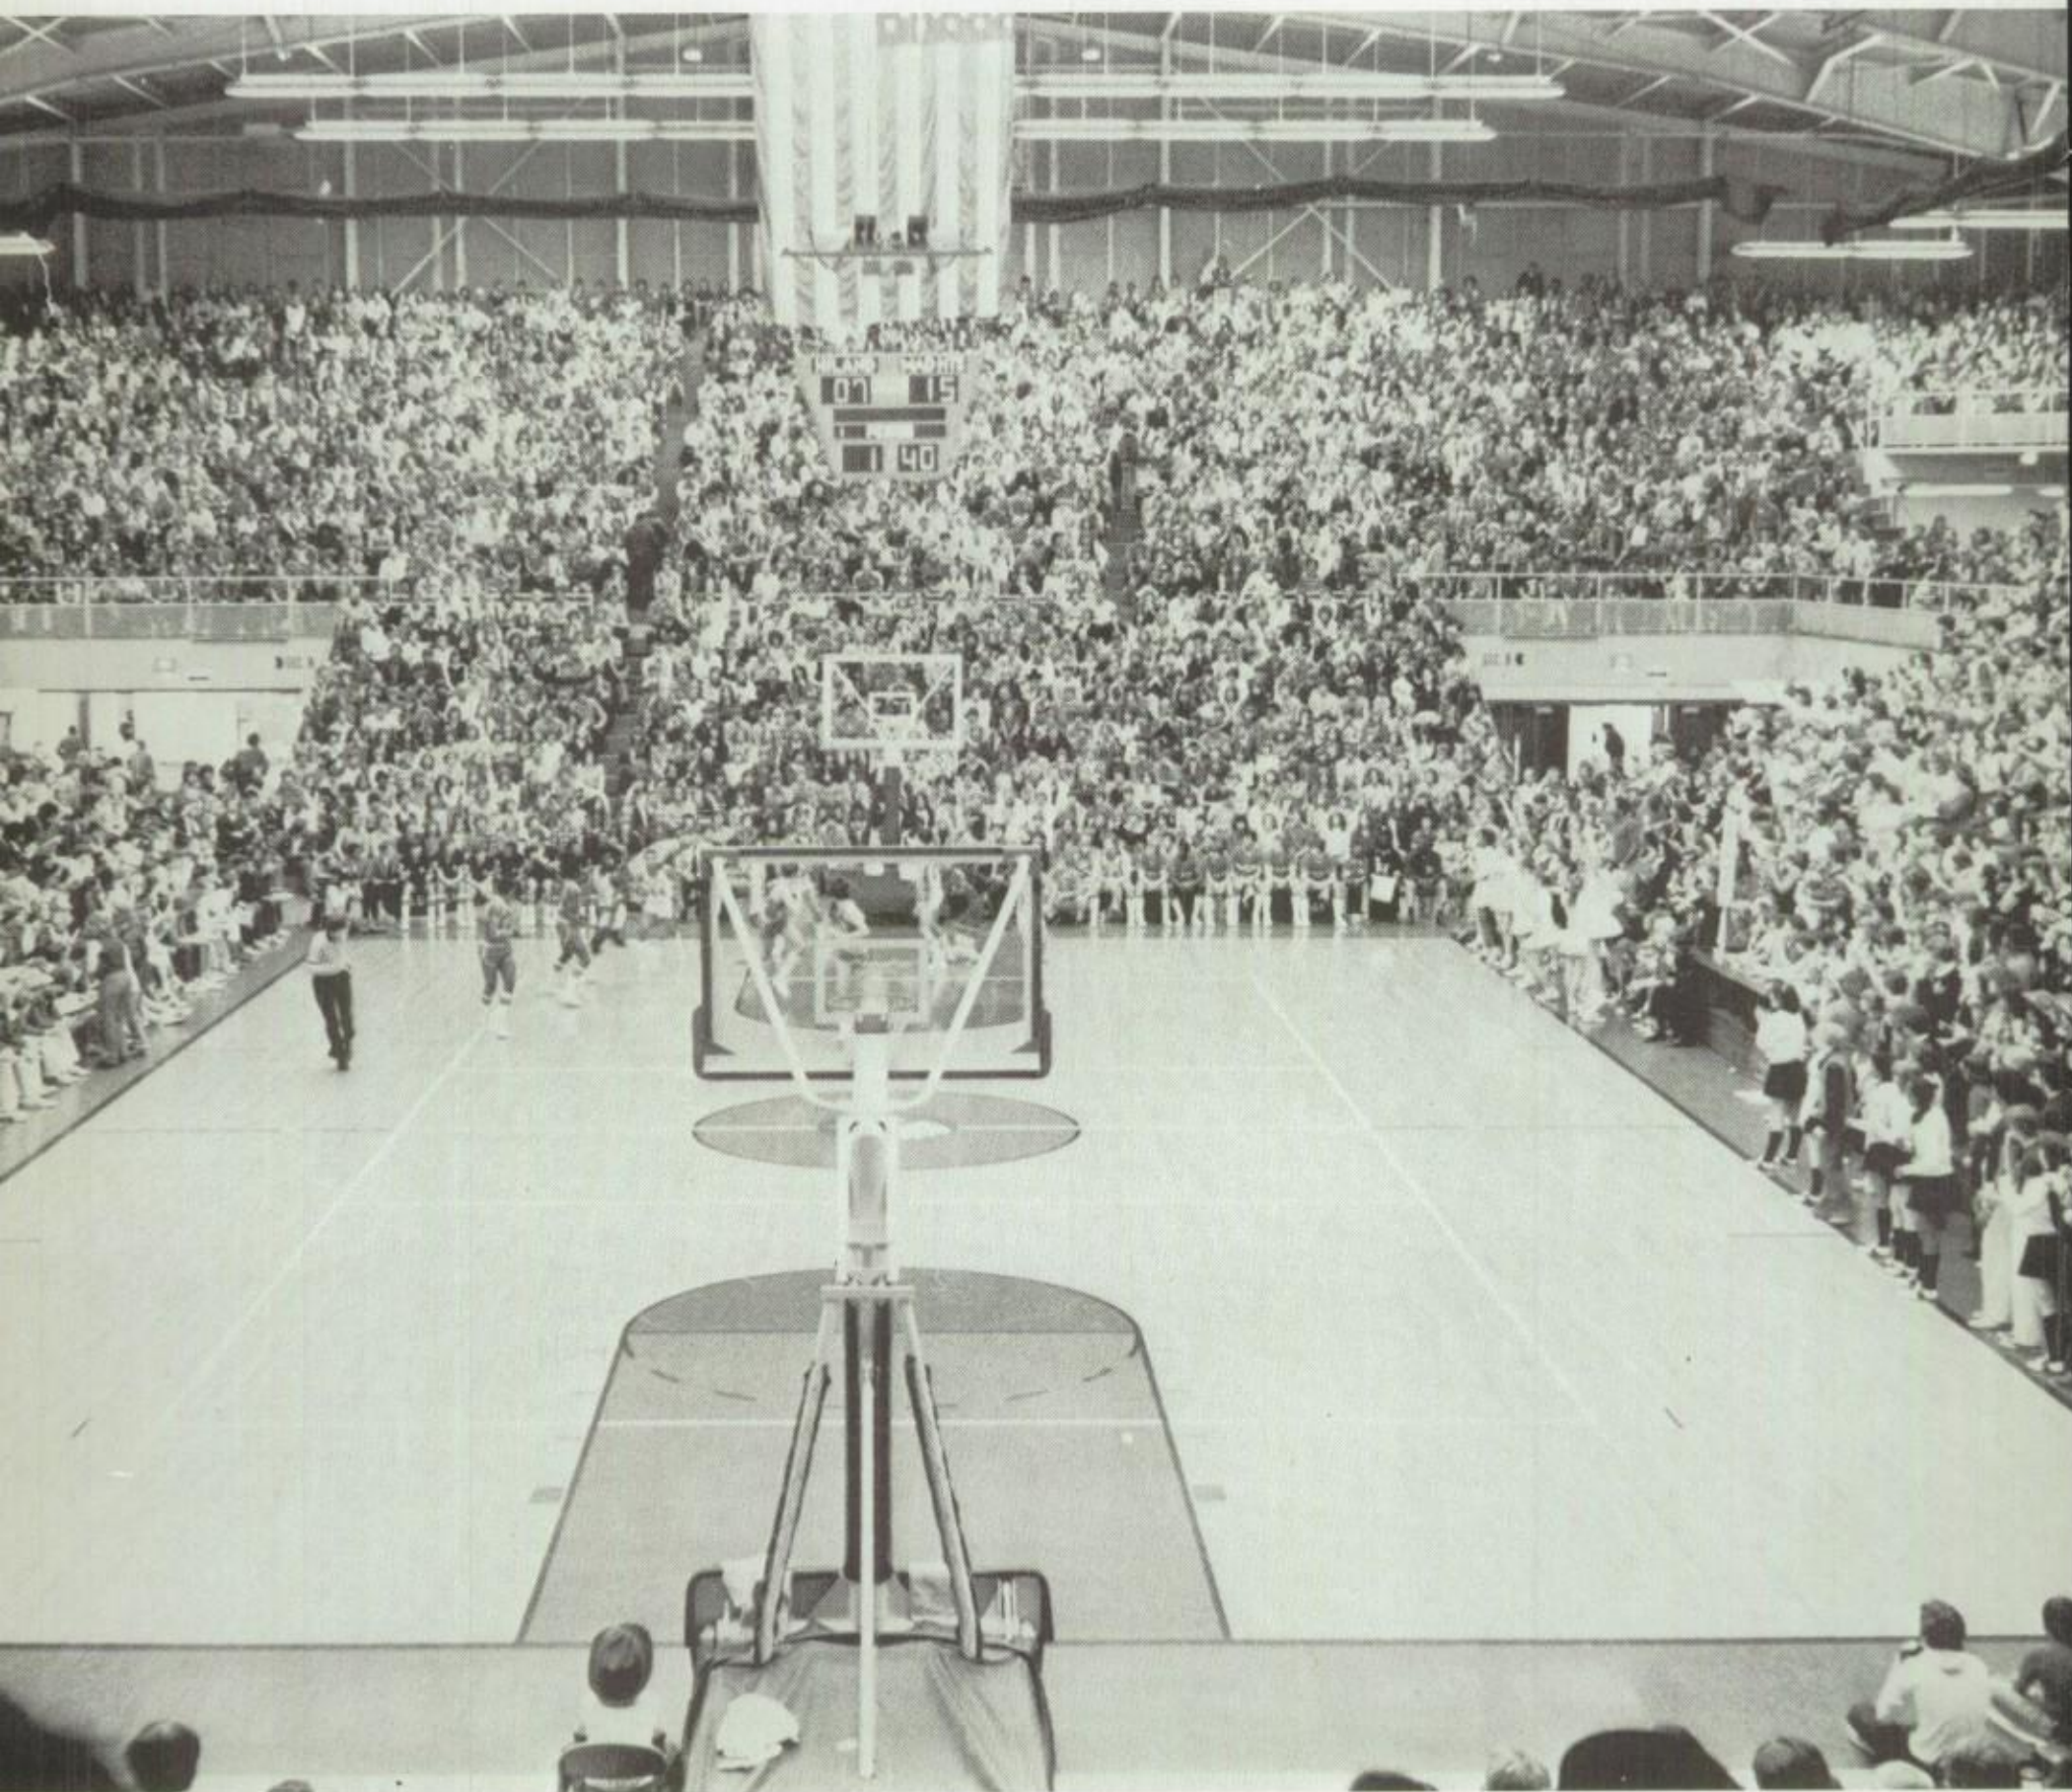

In 1876 the first graduating class, a class consisting of only four people, graduated from Anderson High School with the motto "Go forth and others will follow." Some 104 years and nearly 28,000 graduates later the motto still prevailed.

Spirit, pride and tradition were just three of the very evident qualities that made being an Indian a life long commitment. Whether he be a toddler or an eighty year old, an Indian fan stood out in a crowd. The school colors, red and green, held special significance for every Indian. For those who graduated from AHS, years spent serving, learning and gaining from the school would not be casually discarded as simply past.

It was the Indian and everything it stood for that made freshmen eager to become a part of it all. Perhaps it was only this pride that kept freshmen and seniors alike going during long winter day.

In 1980 the Indian remained a strong tradition but also grew. With each student at AHS the Indian developed more. Involvement in the community and participation in school activities changed it somewhat. Every AHS'er left a part, big or small, of himself in the Indian that would be developed or reformed by new Indians the next year - but never replaced.

As the year ended, the seniors were inclined to look back at all the good and bad things that had taken place over the past four years. Everything from being the first freshmen class at AHS, to sitting in the gym during a bomb scare.

Probably every senior could remember the smell of formaldehyde that contaminated the halls from the biology rooms... the endless time spent counting the cracks in the floor during a boring class... picking up your date for the dance and being greeted by blinding flashbulbs... participating in clubs and organizations... striving for that varsity letter... and standing outside in sub-zero weather wondering who the "jerk" was that pulled the fire alarm.

Even though the year progressed much like that of every other year, suddenly towards the end of the year, caps, gowns, and diplomas were a part of life. Emotions were varied but apparent. Some were excited, some were tearful, and many had mixed emotions about the whole thing. There were regrets of the past and hopes of the future. The "end" had arrived.

Life would be different for the class of '80. There would be jobs for some, college for others, and for a few, an uncommitted period of rest. While seniors focused on the end of their high school career, AHS became chaotic and even a little depressing. As seniors prepared for graduation, underclassmen watched with admiration, envy and sadness.

... Indians Go

...And That's The Way It Was

The old cliché "no news is good news" proved a great extent to be true. Americans felt they could have done without the news of the nearly 50 hostages being held captive in the US embassy in Iran. Canada proved to be a valuable comrade when helping six additional U.S. citizens escape from Iran.

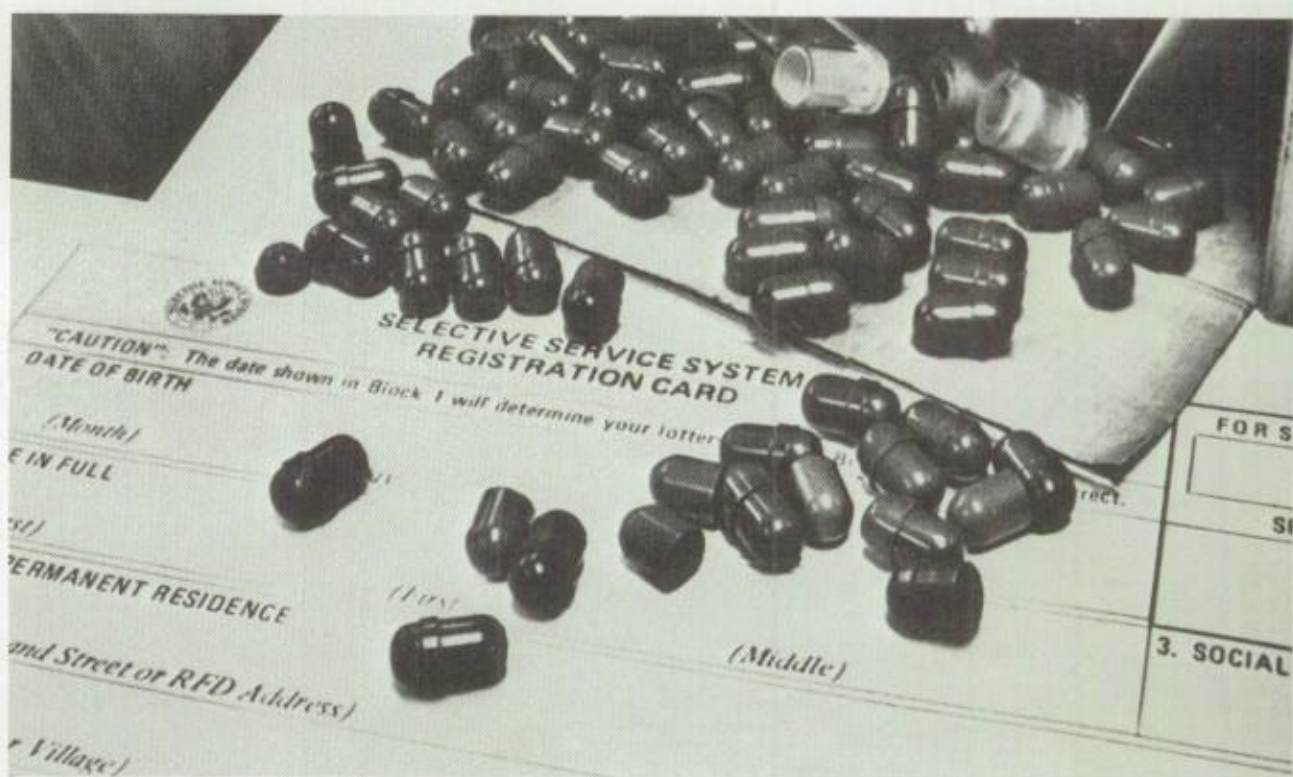

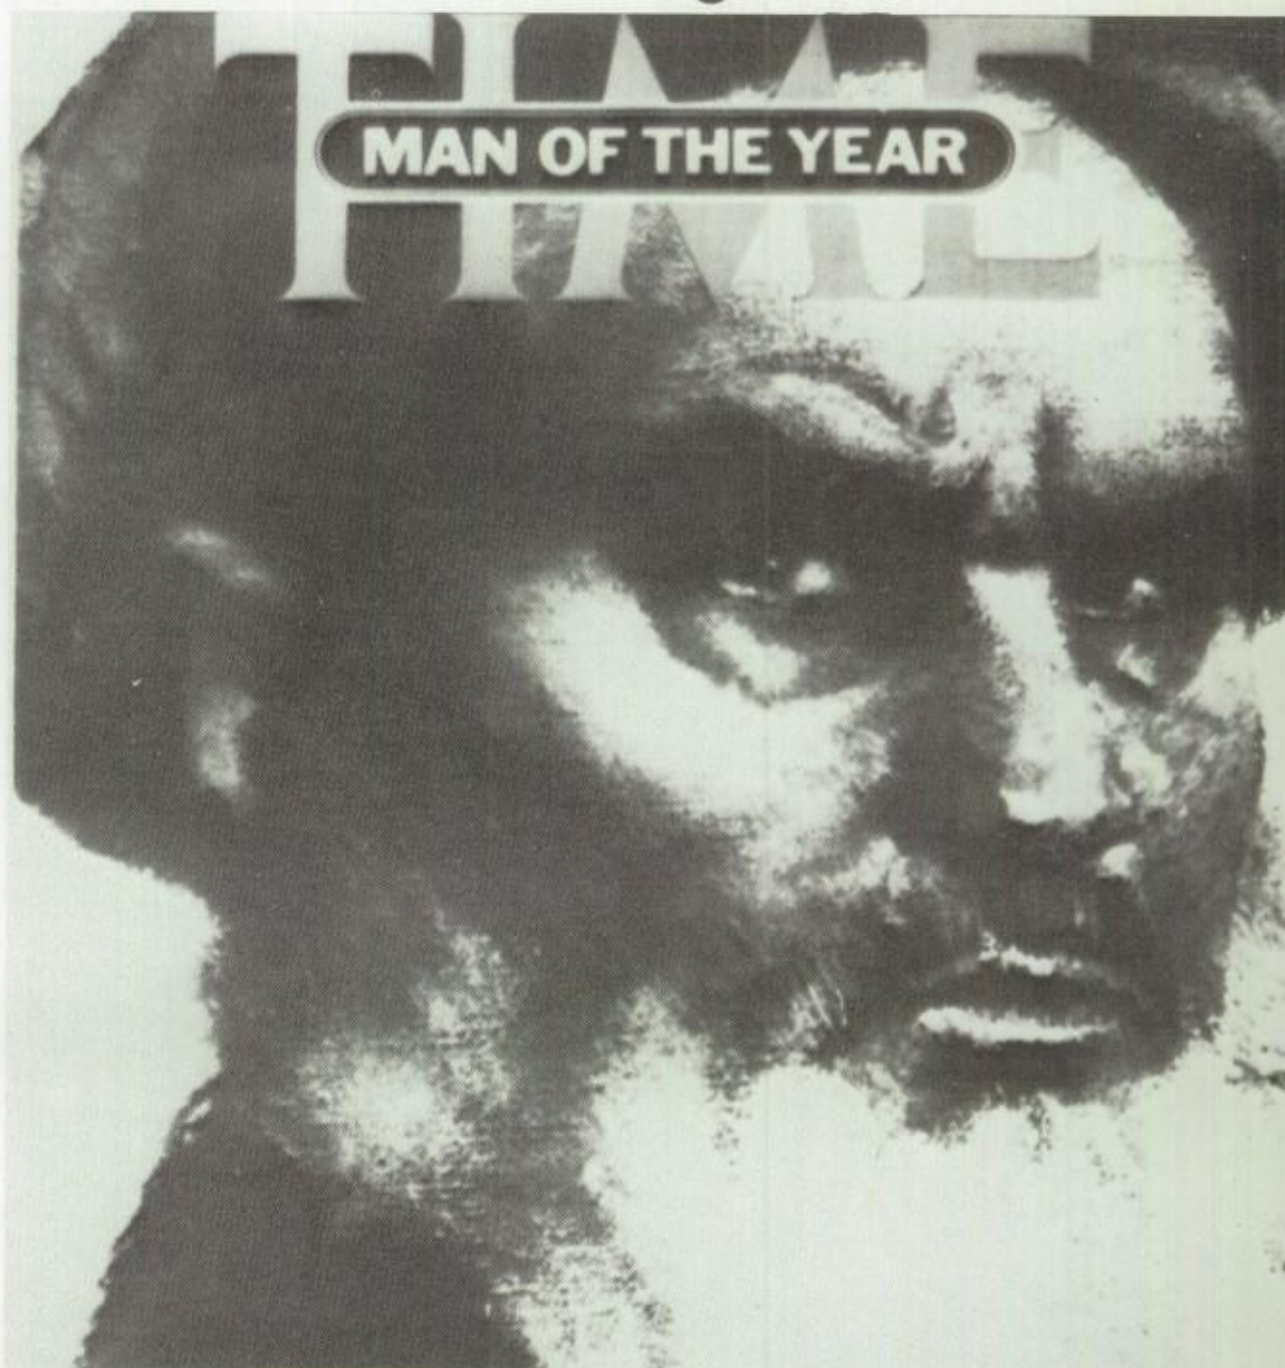

Early in the year Soviets invaded and occupied Afghanistan. President Carter proposed a boycott of the summer Olympics to display the U. S. opposition to the Soviet's invasion. Mixed feelings over just whether or not sports and politics should mix caused a major issue of the new decade.

In January President Carter also recommended to Congress that men and women 18-26 (later changed to 19-20 year olds) register for the draft. Such a suggestion marked the first time in U. S. history that women would even be considered for the draft. However, the issue brought much speculation and debate over whether women should be drafted, and was expected not to pass in Congress.

High prices seemed to be the "in" thing as gasoline and gold prices reached an all time high. Gas climbed to around $1.50 per gallon while gold peaked at $850 per ounce.

Locally bad news became too available to ignore. Anderson had the highest unemployment rate in the country in February due to Guide and Delco layoffs. Highland's coach, Bob Fuller died of a heart attack during a basketball game. After weeks of illness Superintendent of the Anderson Community Schools, Dr. Harold Gallagher, retired.

Although at times it seemed hard to find it, the year did bring some good news. The new mayor, Tom McMahon named the month of February as "happiness is new band uniform month" in an attempt to help the Anderson Marching Indians raise money for the much needed uniforms. Pope John Paul II made a trip to Chicago early in the school year where crowds of people gathered to catch even a glimpse of him. In the winter Olympics the U.S. hockey team won the gold medal, beating USSR for the first since 1968.

Feet, Food Form Fads

The fads and fashions later to be termed characteristic of the new decade began at the feet. Girls wore clogs, can-dees, Nike tennis shoes and hiking boots. Guys also joined in the "footwear fad" by compiling often large and expensive collections of leather tennis shoes.

Dressing up became popular as wool skirts, sweaters, silk shirts and cords often outnumbered blue jeans. Jeans, however, did not die out by any means, and many girls spent over $30 on some jeans.

After the movie "10" became popular, many girls began braiding their hair in all different ways. Pony tails, curly perms and feathered hair were also popular.

Disco dancing grew even more in the new decade with singers like Donna Summers and Michael Jackson producing smash hits. Kenny Rogers helped promote country music with songs like "Coward of the County." Styx, Pink Floyd, Queen, The Village People, ELO, Led Zeppelin, Blondie and Cheap Trick were among the most popular groups.

Movies such as Kramer vs Kramer, and The Amittyville Horror received much acclaim from students and critics alike. However, the average ticket price of $3.50 and the growing popularity of HBO (home box office) kept many kids at home in front of the TV rather than at movies. Top TV shows of the year included everything from 60 Minutes to Saturday Night Live.

The high price of gas, the Mr. Bill Show and the possibility of a draft were among conversation topics of teenagers. While many ate lunch in the cafeteria, others went out to places like Wendy's, McDonald's and Sir Beef. Mr. Donut which opened in January, also became a favorite of students.

The health kick which began in the 70's continued to grow. Teachers and students alike took up jogging to help stay in shape. A combination of roller skating and disco dancing became the new "craze" as places like The Roll Arena and Starskate attracted crowds.

As trends go, the year had them; only to be replaced by new ones the next year. Things like Indian spirit, high school romances and weekends however, would never be changed - only perfected.

Never Stop . . .

The newness of the 1979-80 school year touched the lives of many students. The possibility of a reinstatement of the draft left many wondering just what the word "future" meant. Did it mean gas rationing, war and a recession? Perhaps it meant life on another planet, electric powered cars or a new type of energy. More personally, students wondered if it meant college, time serving in the army, marriage or a career.

As high school days come to a close, many wondered if time spent wishing school away could have been better spent fulfilling one more goal, meeting one more person or trying one different activity. As future became present, a wilted prom bouquet, an autographed yearbook or an "A" sweater seemed to be the only reminder of an activity or event that meant so much during high school.

Although high school was ending for seniors, life was just beginning, and thus continued the endless process of learning, growing and building on a new image.

Boy, poor ol' snoopy his stomach awake, but his head is asleep!

Well, how do you like that for a starting statement?! You are a real nice girl that I met this year, but, I think you already know that!
Your friend,
